GREAT REINFORCEMENTS RUSHED TO EAST

Wavell Calls For No Further Retreat

By The Canadian Press

Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, United Nations commander-in-chief, announced today that the United States and Britain are sending "great reinforcements" to the far Pacific battle theatre, while in the five-day-old siege of Singapore, British gunners rained shells into Japanese troops massed across the mile-wide Johore Strait. He called on his forces "not to retreat another step" before the Japanese onslaught.

"Our part is to gain time for great reinforcements which we and our American Allies are sending to the eastern theatre," Gen. Wavell said, in a special order of the day.

"We are in a similar position to the original British Expeditionary Force which stopped the Germans and saved Europe in the first Battle of Ypres."

Gen. Wavell's message was the second official word in 24 hours that mighty counter blows are to be struck against Japan.

Australia's Army Minister Francis Forde announced yesterday that "a big allied movement" is under way

British Forces Now Withdraw Port Of Derna

LONDON, Feb. 4.—(CP)—British forces have withdrawn from Derna, 160 miles northeast of Benghasi and 95 miles from Tobruk, in their retreat in Libya, a military commentator said today.

The commentator said that was the meaning of a Middle East communique from Cairo which announced that imperial rearguards had completed their movement from their last covering positions about Derna" and had rejoined the main British column.

The main British force in Libya, it was stated, has not yet clashed with Axis assault troops which have pushed roughly two-thirds of the way back from El Agheila, highwater mark of Britain's westward drive, to the starting point on the Egyptian frontier.

The action so far has involved only patrols and covering units, British sources said.

GUARD REINFORCEMENTS

An authoritative British source said that the pick of Germany's U-boat commanders and crews had been shifted to the Mediterranean to help guard the flow of reinforcements to Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's North African army.

He said other factors which had helped the Axis get men and supplies across the Mediterranean were:

1—Use of considerably stronger surface and air convoys.

2—Transport of some supplies on speedy cruisers and destroyers which are more difficult to intercept than slower transport vessels.

3—Weather which recently has been unfavorable to interception.

Malaya Evacuees

Conscription Of Men, Wealth, Industry Is Endorsed By Meighen

TORONTO, Feb. 4.—(CP)—Acceptance for himself and the Conservative Party of the principle of "conscription of men if conscription of wealth and industry is imposed on an equal basis," was announced at a meeting here last night by Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Canadian Conservative leader and candidate in a York South federal by-election Feb. 9.

Mr. Meighen said: "Mr. Coldwell (M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader in the House of Commons) has said his party will accept conscription of men if conscription of wealth and industry is imposed on an equal basis. I accept his offer. I speak for myself and the Conservative Party."

The Conservative leader said he always had favored the type of conscription of wealth now advocated by the C.C.F. and would accept any measure of conscription that would assist in winning the war.

"I am not opposed to the conscription of wealth in the terms th[illegible] Noseworthy (J. W. Noseworthy, C.C.F. candidate in the York South by-election) and Coldwell are now advocating. But if you mean out-and-out government control, that is Socialism and it is nonsense. The government can't run the farms as well as the farmer and if it can't run the factories as efficiently as the man who built the factory."

Woman Member Stresses Need Credit Control

By providing economic security and freedom immediately through monetary and financial reform, the country's morale can be built up to win "Not only the war but the peace following it," Mrs. Cornelia Ralley Wood, S.C. Stony Plain, told members of the legislature on Wednesday.

Mrs. Wood, only woman member of the house, continued the debate on the speech from the throne and dealt entirely with the question of financial reform and control of credit by the people.

She declared people in Canada were whole-heartedly co-operating with the Dominion government in its war effort policies.

Increased agricultural production, she said, was providing Britain with food at 25 per cent. less than the British price paid. The Dominion government was subsidizing the farmers for the difference.

ADVANCING DISCOUNT

"For years the Social Credit government has been advancing the price discount," she said, "and here we have the Ottawa government at last using a price discount method."

She stated that expansion of lumbering, mining and urban industries all was a result of the expansion of credit.

Mankind, she said, must soon realize that it can and must control the cash and credit circulation of the country or it would soon be enslaved.

"We struggled for our political freedom," she said. "But now we are facing a greater fight than ever —the fight for financial freedom or

Only Six Rinks Are Undefeated In Curling Meet

Only six rinks remained undefeated in the 25th annual bonspiel of the Alberta Curling Association when play was completed in the noon draw Wednesday. The six were Dark of the Royal, Schmidt of Millet, Veilleux and C. V. Cairns of the Edmonton Club, Bert Robinson of Jasper and Hunter of Sylvan Lake.

Another feature of this morning's play was the defeat of the Sjolie rink Dunrose by the veteran Tom Lorimer of Lacombe. The Sjolies, who held the spotlight on Tuesday by beating Manahan and Bell, went down to a nip and tuck 12-11 defeat by the Lacombe squad at Alberta Avenue.

There will be no draw this evening, the night being left free for the annual banquet of the Alberta Curling Association which starts at the Macdonald hotel at 6:30 p.m.

Following are the results of the 8:30 a.m. draw today.

Recruiting May Have Bearing On Conscription

By B. T. RICHARDSON
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 4.—Voluntary enlistments in the Canadian army during the month of January established a record total of around 13,000, it was reported reliably here yesterday. Observers saw in the report immediately important information that may alter the drive for conscription, and already the question was being discussed in parliamentary lobbies whether recruiting on this scale on a voluntary basis can be expected to continue.

The January recruiting total represented practically the manpower requirement for the new armored division announced by Prime Minister King recently, though in actuality this new division is to be formed out of a reconstruction of the existing fourth infantry division. It also represented practically double the current monthly quota required to meet all manpower needs of the Canadian army for reinforcements and replacements.

Observers were interested in watching the effect of recruiting information upon the conscription drive, which has been based to a large extent on the contention that recruiting had broken down.

Liberal Government Is Now In Thick Of Fight On Conscription Vote

This is the second of two articles on Canada's conscription plebiscite and the political storm it has caused.—EDITOR.

MONTREAL, Feb. 4.—Bombarded by the Conservative opposition, and upheld by the majority of Liberals, the Mackenzie King government today is in the midst of the second week's political fight over its plebiscite on overseas conscription.

Political circles agreed that the opposition might fight a delaying action until Arthur Meighen, political veteran and acid-tongued fighter, enters the House toward the end of February. Meighen has still to win a seat, in the by-election in South York, Ontario, on Feb. 9.

Prime Minister King struck back hotly at his critics with the charge that some chose to ignore everything else in Canada's war effort except the sending of military forces overseas. Defending the plebiscite, in which he asks release from his 1940 promise of no conscription, King declared he refused to "erect bad faith and the broken pledge into a principle of action" as the Nazis have done.

MAKEUP OF FORCES

Canada, he declared, has 100,000 men in the Air Force, 27,000 in the navy of ships and 200,000 soldiers all committed to fight anywhere in the world, and all of them volunteers. These include an army corps in Britain, which is being expanded into two corps this year with a second armored division.

Canada has so far in this war provided $1,300,000,000 for war supplies to Britain, in addition to her own war effort, and will provide another one billion dollars for goods to Britain between now and the spring of 1943.

Out of a national income—previously estimated to reach $5,000,000,000 this year—King said Canada's war budget for the coming year would total three billions.

The last census completed in 1941 gave Canada's population as 11,419,856.

OPPOSITION SORE POINTS

Sore points voiced by the opposition have included:

First, that if Canada were invaded, United States troops would come here to defend her, under the Roosevelt-King agreement, but that Canada's home defence forces, conscripted to fight within Canada's borders, could not go to the aid of the United States if that country were attacked.

Second, that a plebiscite is not necessary and that full conscription of manpower and resources should be enacted at once.

Third, that King has not clearly told the country what he intends to do if the plebiscite passes. This criticism has been voiced by spokesmen for both parties, with the opposition demanding a clear-cut answer in the house, and four British Columbia Liberals declaring King should have made it a clear conscription issue.

Year-Round Use For University Now Advocated

Suggestion that study may be given to making the utmost use of the University of Alberta's facilities on a year-round basis, with further thought to be given to establishing four three-month terms in the year, is made in the report of the university survey commission, it was learned reliably Wednesday.

The commission's report, following survey of the facilities and administration of the university, has been submitted to the government and it has been stated by Premier William Aberhart that it will form the basis for legislation to amend the University Act.

EDUCATION FOR VETS

In an address at the university's Alumni Association's banquet last Saturday night, Dr. Robert Newton, acting president of the university and a member of the commission, stated that the Dominion government planned to subsidize university education for returned servicemen after the war and that, coupled with this assistance, it would require year-round operation.

It is learned that the commission does not make a final recommendation on this subject, but urges that further thought be given to making the most use of the institution's facilities and that the system of four quarterly terms in the year, as practiced by many U. S. colleges, be studied.

At the present time the university term here is seven months.

Today's War Moves

A siege as spectacular as that of Singapore is likely to result from the impending Japanese attempt to occupy Java and its naval-air base, Soerabaya.

Signs are multiplying that the attempt will be made sooner than generally had been expected. Earlier, Allied strategists believed the Japanese would concentrate first on Malaya and the Philippines, devoting their main effort to cleaning up there before taking on other tasks. Certainly, it is was thought they would want to reduce singapore before storming the strongly-defended island of Java.

But as the Japanese strategy unfolded, it became apparent that their need for haste impelled them to strike in all directions before the United Nations got fully organized. They made strong attacks on Bur-

Cabinet Changes

Lord Beaverbrook, top, today was assigned to the new post of minister of production in the Churchill government in the long-awaited cabinet shakeup. He will be succeeded as minister of supply by Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, below, who has been president of the board of trade.

Beaverbrook Named To Fill New War Post

LONDON, Feb. 4—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill created the new cabinet post of minister of war production today, an assignment aimed specifically at peak cooperation between Britain and the United States, and entrusted it to Lord Beaverbrook, one of his most valued aides.

The new ministry roughly parallels the office of Donald Nelson in directing the United States' war production.

Making that comparison himself in the House of Commons last week, Mr. Churchill said:

"All the resources of our two countries are now pooled in shipping, munitions and raw materials; and some similar office—I will not say with the same scope but with similar scope—must be created here if harmonious and complete working between Great Britain and the United States is maintained at this high level."

DUNCAN SUCCESSOR

Lord Beaverbrook is succeeded as minister of supply by Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, until now president of the board of trade and Lord Beaverbrook's predecessor at the supply ministry.

The presidency of the board of trade went to Col. J. J. Llewellin, for many years a junior minister whose most recent post was under secretary of war transport.

Announcement of the new appointments, issued from 10 Downing Street, did not mention Sir Staf-long way toward meeting the wheat price views urged on Ottawa this week by a delegation from Saskatchewan. However, western wheat growers will be asked first to agree to restrict 1942 crop deliveries.

Ottawa circles say the government is drafting an offer to the delegation which will include the following terms:

1—An initial payment of 90 cents per bushel for the 1942 crop—or 20 cents per bushel above the present peg—if wheat growers restrict deliveries to 200,000,000 bushels from the three prairie provinces.

2—A somewhat higher initial payment grading up to one dollar, as requested by the delegation if the growers agree to further restrict the crop to a possible minimum of 250,000,000 bushels.

MACLEOD

The basis for the scheme is said to be acreage and that is why no one in the capital can say what the yield eventually will be.

The plan will be based, according to these reports, on the number of acres necessary to grow 253,000,000 or 250,000,000 bushels of wheat under normal conditions.

It is significant that while in the east officers of the delegation held several discussions with technical experts of the department of agriculture.

The discussions centred on the problems of converting wheat land to other uses.

URGES DEFENCE MEASURES

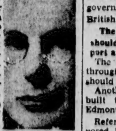

M. P. Sees Definite Jap Threat To Alberta, B.C.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—(CP) —British Columbia and Alberta face a very definite danger of attack by Japanese unless the government takes more adequate steps with the United States to provide western defence facilities, Gray Turgeon (Lib., Carleton) declared in the House of Commons yesterday.

"We in British Columbia and you in Alberta are in a dangerous position. I am not afraid of direct attack upon Vancouver or Esquimalt as I am of a positively planned attack across the Aleutian Islands and Alaska." Mr. Turgeon said.

Canada and the United States should thoroughly arm and train a large force of troops ready to ship into Siberia the moment Japan and Russia become entangled.

"That very movement will see Japan occupying air bases in Siberia and Manchukuo which are only minutes from Alaska, an hour or two from northern British Columbia, and four or five hours from Edmonton and Vancouver."

Turgeon

Mr. Turgeon said he felt some steps now should be taken for western defences. These included the following:

Prince Rupert should be made a joint naval base for the United States and Canada.

The road from Prince Rupert to Prince George should be completed as a military road by the Dominion government and without cost to the British Columbia government;

The airport at Prince George should be connected with the airport at Edmonton;

The whole line of airports through the north west to Alaska should be connected by a highway;

Another military road should be built to connect Vancouver and Edmonton.

HURLING NAZIS BACK

Russians Drive Nearer Smolensk

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Feb. 4.—(AP)—A fierce renewal of the Russian power drive west of Moscow is hurling reinforced German divisions back upon the key invasion base of Smolensk, 230 miles west of the capital, the government newspaper Izvestia reported today.

It said heavy fighting was in progress in several vital towns in the central sector, where front dispatches reported many villages and towns in Smolensk province already cleared of the invaders.

The powerful Red army counter offensive into the Donets basin at the same time was said to be progreasing without check, with the Soviet high command's strategy of constant flanking and outflanking manoeuvres keeping the Germans off balance all along the line.

Russia Uses Subtle Propaganda To Blast Nazi Morale

Leaflets, Newspapers, Broadcasts Urge Enemy To Lay Down Their Arms

By A. T. STEELE.

Copyright, 1942, by the Chicago Daily News and The Edmonton Bulletin

MOSCOW, Feb. 4.—Parallel with military operations the Russian armies are attacking German morale with every weapon of propaganda at their command. Besides shedding showers of leaflets almost daily over enemy lines, the Russians at some points on the front are broadcasting news reports and appeals to the German soldiers from portable loudspeakers. Such broadcasts are usually preceded by careful investigation of the personnel and the special problems of the troops to whom they are directed.

A dispatch today from the Kalinin front tells how the opening attack was accompanied by a broadcast urging the enemy troops to surrender. The broadcaster, who sat in a truck a mile from the German lines, gave his name as Hans Muller, freshly taken prisoner, and made the following appeal:

"Soldiers, listen, listen! Your comrade, Corp. Hans Muller speaking. Yesterday I surrendered to the Russians and I feel as if a mountain had fallen off my shoulders. Do you hear my voice? I won't risk my life any longer for the crazy Hitler. You should think better of it too. Believe me, you are caught like rats in a trap. You are encircled. Resistance is senseless. If you don't abandon this foolish fight you will be exterminated to the last man.

A. T. Steele

"Friends, how do you feel in your lousy clothing with swollen legs and boils on your faces? Remember the fate of Napoleon's army. If you don't perish from frost, Russian bullets will catch up with you. You won't succeed in saving yourselves. Give up. This is the only means of saving yourselves from death.

STRAIGHT TO GRAVE

"Do you hear me, Johann? This is me, your friend, talking to you. Do you hear me, Peter, Carl, Michael? You've crawled long enough before that scoundrel, Lt. Vogel. He will send you straight to your grave."

Somewhat more subtle is the printed propaganda which is issued in huge quantities in leaflet form and scattered among the Germans from airplanes. Most of these are in German but there are also special issues for Polish, Italian, Spanish, Rumanian and Hungarian forces fighting under Hitler's command.

Besides numerous miscellaneous Bulletins, the Russians issue three regular news services for German troops in the field. One is entitled, "Auslands Nachrichten" — "Foreign News". Another is, Nachrichten Von Der Front"—"News From the Front". And the third is entitled, "Was Geht in Deutschland Vor"—"What Is Happening in Germany."

For the present month alone the Russians have issued something something over 100 different kinds of leaflets and pamphlets for distribution behind the German lines. I have copies of most of them. They also publish a lithographed, pictorial monthly, called "Front Illustriente," which is made up of photographs of dead Germans, captured equipment, activities of German prisoners in Russian camps, and reproductions of snapshots of wives, mothers and children, taken from German corpses.

Propaganda carefully refrains from attacking the German people or rank and file of the German army, but pounds unendingly at Hitler and his crimes. The leaflets ceaselessly urge the soldiers to turn in their Fuehrer, and tempt them with good treatment if they surrender.

WORLD'S MAIN ENEMY

Foreign news bulletins are skillfully edited and contain matter-of-fact reproductions of items suppressed by the German propaganda machine. President Roosevelt's speech to Congress is reported in full as is the recent statement by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox calling for the destruction of Hitler as the world's main enemy. The Pan-American conference at Rio gets prominent treatment. The rift in the German high command is reported fully. German defeats in Russia and Libya are frequently reviewed.

The Bolsheviks always regarded propaganda as one of their primary weapons and they believe that this offensive of words will have a growing effect. Red army men assert that one of the reasons for the tendency of German morale, despite recent military setbacks, is that Hitler's soldiers have very little knowledge of the increasingly unfavorable world situation or of the true extent of the retreat in Russia.

MORALE IS FRAYING

Prisoners captured near Leningrad were said to know nothing of the Soviet counter-offensive at Moscow. While it would be folly to suppose that the morale of the German army has yet been seriously undermined, there are signs that it is fraying around the edges. Prisoners taken lately by the Russians are unmistakably lower in quality and fighting spirit than those seized in the earlier stages of the war. However, all Russian reports stress the doggedness of the rearguard resistance of the Germans. They savagely fight to the bitter end and when they surrender it is generally as individuals or isolated groups.

scription pledges, Mr. Turgeon said he would support the plebiscite.

"I voted against conscription while in uniform overseas in the last war, not because I was against conscription, but because of the dastardly associations which surrounded it at that time.

"Today I am not unmindful of the same associations some people are attempting to weave about it, but I am ready to trust the government and particularly the prime minister.

"After the plebiscite, if the people vote favorably, and I hope they do, it is my intention to support every measure of compulsory service that the prime minister and the government may think necessary to bring to the people of Canada."

Mr. Turgeon was applauded by members on both sides as he made his declaration of attitude in the throne speech debate.

He said he was concerned at "some of the agitation" which was being carried on in the country.

"I have noticed that despite all this demand for conscription county councils and other bodies are passing resolutions demanding that the government stop taking men off the land and into the army," he said. "That is happening not only in Quebec but in Ontario and other parts of English-speaking Canada."

"I often wonder where some people who speak of leadership, hate Adolf Hitler more or Mackenzie King more," he said.

TOTAL WAR

"One of the truths of the present situation is that some people are anxious for total war against Germany only to the extent it will not interfere with their total war against Mackenzie King."

Had it not been for Mr. King and his efforts in obtaining the Ogdensburg agreement with the United States the material help that country gave Great Britain and other allies under the lease-lend act would not have come about. The occupation of Iceland by American soldiers was the result of the Ogdensburg agreement. That helped to save the Battle of the Atlantic and protect the northern approaches to Canada.

The Atlantic meeting between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill was another consequence of the Ogdensburg meeting of Mr. King and Mr. Roosevelt and of Mr. King's leadership.

MAKES RECOMMENDATIONS

"I have made recommendations to the government which have not been acted upon, but who am I to condemn the government for that?" Mr. Turgeon said.

On the day of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor he had wired the prime minister recommending that the government take immediate action against Japan without waiting for parliament to meet.

He had also repeated recommendations submitted before the Japanese attack, as follows:

1—The creation of a ministry of war.

2—Extension of the National Resources Mobilization Act to permit compulsory service in any part of the western hemisphere and Siberia, and provide for further extension as circumstances warrant.

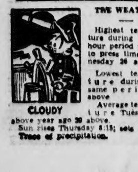

These recommendations were not carried out, but Mr. Turgeon said he was willing to leave them to the judgment of the government and its officers.

"I wanted the National Resources Mobilization Act extended because I could see the coming of war with Japan," he said.

ma, Borneo, Celebes and Amboina, Dutch eastern naval base of the Indies.

They appear to have established themselves firmly at Pontianak and Balik Papan, on the west and east coasts of Borneo; on Celebes and probably on Amboina, although the Dutch are reported resisting strongly there. Menacing spearheads, close to Java, thus are pointing at the island from the north and east.

The Japanese have put the finger on Java with the preliminary bombing of Soerabaja and Banka and Billiton Islands, north of Batavia. All previous Japanese landings or attacks have been immediately preceded by bombing. Their intensive bombardment of Singapore, for instance, probably presages an early land assault.

OMINOUS SIGN

Another ominous sign for Java is contained in a statement by a Chinese military spokesman at Chungking. He reported that 12 days ago a convoy of 63 transports and warships was seen steaming southward in the strait between Amoy and Formosa, about 2,000 miles from Java.

Also, the spokesman said, a day later 400 Japanese vessels carrying troops southward were sighted off the coast of Chekiang province, south of Shanghai. He said further bodies of Japanese were being assembled in North China.

All of that points to the invasion of Java on the grand scale. Invasion troops to the number indicated would not likely be destined for the Philippines or Singapore, where the defenders are already heavily outnumbered. They probably are the second and third sections of the fleet of 100 which was engaged by Allied airships in the Strait of Macassar and diverted, for the time being, from Java.

Lacking the necessary sea power, the Allies will have to rely on their bombers to meet the new threat. They did a good job on the first fleet, but the Japanese probably will provide better air escort for the new contingents.

STIFF RESISTANCE

It is hard to see how the Japanese can be prevented from landing on Java if they attack in sufficient force. Once there, however, they are likely to meet with stiff resistance. Sorabaja is described as a second Singapore.

The island itself is the most strongly defended in the Indies, being the richest of the Dutch possessions. The pick of the East Indies army is stationed there, although in what numbers it is hard to tell. The army consists of probably not more than 150,000 effectives and has to be spread thin to defend other islands of the far flung group.

Woman Member Stresses Need Credit Control

economic security. The constitutional democracies must exercise the power which they have, to create their own credit and take away that power from those who exercise it today."

BANK SHOULD WORK

Stating that the Bank of Canada should be "put to work to issue credit and currency in terms of the public need," the legislature's woman member continued, "Nobody suggests the issue of unlimited credit; everybody who has given the subject of credit-issue even the most trivial study is alive to the dangers of over-doing a good thing.

"Issuing more money does not cause an inflation if there is a proportionate increase in the amount of goods produced. Conversely a decrease in the amount of money does not cause a deflation, if there is a proportionate decrease in the amount of goods produced."

She declared that the time for monetary reform was now. "It is a very important part of the war," she said. "It is the war on the home front."

The war effort, she said, should only be limited by the materials and man-power available. The war should be fought with "debt free money," she urged.

shrewdest military strategists, also declared the Japanese "have now reached an area where we cannot be constantly out-flanked and where the enemy cannot exploit superior mobility."

Japanese bombers blasted anew at the Singapore defenders, inflicting some damage but few military casualties, British headquarters said.

Embers still smouldered in the wreckage from yesterday's aerial assaults, in which the toll was listed as 22 killed and 90 wounded.

WAR ON OTHER FRONTS

On the other fronts in the far Pacific conflict:

Netherlands East Indies—Netherlands and Japanese troops were locked in heavy fighting on Amboina Island, site of the Indies' second biggest naval base, 635 miles north of Australia.

British North Borneo—Berlin quoted Tokyo headquarters as claiming Japanese forces captured the Celebes seaport of Tawao on the southeast coast of British Borneo. This was not confirmed.

Burma—A Tokyo broadcast said Japanese bombers, attacking by moonlight, raided an airport at Rangoon and twice heavily bombed an airfield at Toungoo, between Rangoon and Mandalay on the Burma road to China. A delayed Rangoon dispatch said the Japanese land attacks on Burma have not reached the proportions of a major offensive.

JAPS SEE MENACE

Domei, Japanese News Agency, asserted the northern part of Singapore Island presents a bleak, lifeless scene, broken only by the movement of trucks creeping along the coastal hills. But Domei took note, too, of "camouflaged concrete pillboxes with square loopholes, studded along the strait, menacing any invasion attempt."

United States air and sea forces were expected in Washington to take an increasingly heavy toll of Japanese expeditions now threatening Java, the heart of the Netherlands East Indies, but there was no evidence at the capital of any large-scale plan to reinforce the southwest Pacific area with American men and weapons.

The U.S. navy disclosed that Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Philippine command—repulsing Japanese landing attempts and counter-attacking at times on Batan Peninsula—included a newly organized battalion of bluejackets and marines. These presumably were men left behind by the navy in withdrawing from menaced Manila Bay base a month ago.

Flying Forts Proving Worth In Pacific War

By MACK JOHNSON

Copyright, 1942, by the British United Press and The Edmonton Bulletin

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The U. S. army's 22-ton flying fortress bombers are writing a new saga in aerial warfare in the far Pacific.

These four-engined aerial battleships, heavily armed and armored, are smashing Japanese supply lines, bases, transports, naval concentrations and air bases, all the way from the Philippines to the Dutch Indies and Malaya in the face of tremendous Japanese numerical superiority. Yet the day-by-day story of official communiques shows they are more than holding their own.

A check of official records on the Far Eastern front during the past two months tells of flying fortresses which were engaged frequently by swarms of supposedly faster and more manoeuvreable Japanese fighter planes. There are five instances cited, although there are probably many others not reported. The box score shows 27 Japanese fighters downed against three losses of U. S. bombers—a nine to one ratio.

Veteran fliers believe this is a remarkable record in view of the popular belief that huge bombers are vulnerable to attacks by swifter moving, more manoeuvreable fighting planes. Despite this, the 300-mile-an-hour American bombers are meeting the challenge, it appears, even without escort protection

The big bombers which were developed by the Boeing Aircraft Co., have written a flaming toll in the Macassar Strait. In this and other areas they have accounted for 16 ships destroyed and many others damaged.

The total against Japanese shipping in the Far East includes the 29,000-ton battleship Haruna, which was struck directly by bombs from a fortress flown by the late Capt. Colin P. Kelly, Jr., other sinkings included a destroyer, 10 transports, a cruiser, a tanker and two lighters.

The remarkable performance of the big bombers, which carry crews ranging from six to nine men and cost about $300,000 each, is attributed by many to their ability to unload their explosives from altitudes of 35,000 feet or higher with exceptional accuracy through use of a secret bombsight.

Preliminary reports on the bombers have heartened high-ranking War Department officials, who have been boosting them as a kingpin in future U.S. military forces. They are to be a big part of President Roosevelt's program calling for 185,000 planes during the next two years, the last published schedule called for production of 1,000 big bombers a month when the multi-billion dollar air program is in full swing.

Britain gave the flying fortresses their baptism of fire in modern aerial warfare. When the French army was still intact, the British were only luke-warm to the big craft, which have a range of more than 3,000 miles. They preferred smaller bombers which could be produced faster and cheaper.

But the fall of France changed the British attitude, since long-range performance was necessary to reach into Germany. They also wanted improvements in the then existent models to include turbo-superchargers to permit high-altiture flying, leak-proof gasoline tanks, power-driven gun turrets and more gunpower in the rear. These and more improvements have been incorporated in the newest models, some of which are in use in the Far East.

"Today, Britain and other countries are pleading with ever-increasing fervor for any of that type they can get, from one to 1,000," Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the U.S. army air forces, said recently.

Reports from abroad tell of these big ships making daylight and night raids over Germany recently at altitudes up to 35,000 feet. Army officials said they were "virtually immune" to anti-aircraft fire from the ground, and can "outdistance anything in Europe in fighter planes at an altitude of 32,000 feet or higher." Virtually no trouble in manoeuvring or in mechanical failure under combat conditions has been reported, it was said.

WAR CREATES MORAL DISLOCATION

Juvenile Crime Shows Sharp Increase In Britain Now

Shelter Temptations, Higher Pay For Youths Are Delinquency Causes

The following is the first of two dispatches on juvenile crime in wartime Britain by William H. Stoneman, correspondent for the Chicago Daily News and The Edmonton Bulletin. The second will be published shortly.—EDITOR.

By WILLIAM H. STONEMAN

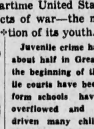

Copyright, 1942, by the Chicago Daily News and The Edmonton Bulletin

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The bitter experience of wartime England may help to save wartime United States from one of the greatest bad by-products of war—the moral dislocation of its youth.

Juvenile crime has increased by about half in Great Britain since the beginning of the war. Juvenile courts have been jammed, reform schools have long since overflowed and the war has driven many children, between their 8th and 17th birthdays, into criminal acts.

EXCLUSIVE

In Britain the increase of child-hood crime has been partly, but only partly, avoidable. In the opinion of British official workers and juvenile court judges, all of the potential causes for the wartime increase in juvenile crime in this country are generally agreed to be the following:

Stoneman

1. Wartime evacuation of children to strange districts.

2. Breakup of family life by air raids and the substitution of unwholesome shelter life for normal life.

3. Lack of parental control due to the preoccupation of parents.

4. Additional facilities for easy crimes provided by the blackout and partial destruction and abandonment of buildings containing objects of value.

5. Preoccupation of police with wartime duties.

HIGH WAGES

6. Abnormally high wages paid to juveniles, and association of youngsters with older people of questionable standards.

7. Disruption of schools and disorganization of clubs and other established recreation centers.

8. Wartime abandon.

Various experts differ regarding the relative importance of these different causes. One of the country's most eminent authorities, John A. F. Watson, of the borstal and juvenile court, emphasizes the harmful effect of excessive wages and the breakup of family life. Many munitions workers pay the principal blame on the breakup of school and club life. All agree that shelter life during the blackout and bombings has raised Cain by making petty crime hopelessly easy and tempting.

Watson explains the practical effects of the various factors.

"Even though the evacuation had worked perfectly," he says, "it could not have replaced one important thing, namely, family life and the security of the home. The removal of children from their own homes has had most unpleasant emotional consequences and has resulted in an army of unhappy children. The same sort of children you get in broken homes. And ordinarily, 75 per cent of delinquent children come from broken homes. Evacuation has resulted in thousands of "broken homes." There has been a lot of stupid talk about the prevalence of bedwetting among evacuee children. Any psychologist can tell you that it is sign of emotional distress and the records show that 75 per cent of all the evacuees who are accused of it never had done it at home.

ANXIETY OF CHILDREN

"Evacuations have also caused great anxiety among the children because of worry over their parents' safety and the feeling that the parent who acquiesced in the child's evacuation couldn't love him.

"Early evacuations were combined with educational chaos. For a year there were not any schools operating in many parts of London. Take, for example, the boy who was evacuated at the age of 13½. Let us say he remained in the country for three months. When he returned to London, he found no school, no Scouts organization and his father had probably joined the army. So he probably loafed around another three months until he was 14, when he was legally able to get employment. Such a boy really does not have a chance.

"At the same time, older children have been badly affected by the wholesale closing of schools, clubs and Boy Scout meeting places. Many club leaders were called up and the premises were either commandeered by the government or destroyed by bombs.

"The shelter system has done a great deal to break up family life and destroy parental authority. In the poorer districts families slept in shelters. Boys and girls, who had never had facilities for intermingling in peace time, suddenly found release from all restrictions in the dark, crowded shelters.

"When young girls were scolded by their parents for alleged misbehavior, they simply moved to another shelter with their boy friends. In many cases by the time the parents had appealed to police and found the girls, they were in hopelessly serious trouble."

Watson has aroused nation-wide discussion by his insistance upon the importance of high wages in relation to juvenile crime.

CAN LIVE "HIGH"

"In peace-time," he explains, "there was a rule of thumb that a boy worker received one shilling (20 cents) per week for every year of his age. A boy of 16, for example, got 16 shillings ($3.20) per week. Now, due to wartime demand for labor many youngsters get as much as a shilling six pence ($3 cents) per hour; 48 hours per week, with double rates for overtime. Some of them make 3, 4, or even 6 pounds ($12, $16 or $24) a week. The result is they begin to live high, start loafing around in disreputable 'kaffs' and eventually get sacked for inefficiency. They drift from one job to another with the assurance that they can always get a new one.

"I had one boy in my court who had had 10 jobs in seven months. Another had had at least 13 during the war. Many of these young people get into the habit of spending a lot of money, find they can't earn enough and then one day they show up in court."

During one day at Southwark court Watson gave us an exhibition of what he meant. We saw him dispense justice to a dozen youngsters and in practically every case the war had had something to do with their being there.

First came a lad of 10 who had stolen a bicycle from a shed where bombed-out property was temporarily stored. Next came an 11-year-old, named Eric, a platitable little liar, who had helped rob a bakeshop which had temporary cardboard windows. Two 16-year-olds were in trouble for stealing some overalls from their former employer, an act made possible only by the fact that they were able to move from one job to another so easily.

BAD COMPANY

Young Robert, aged 15, had a father in the army and lacked any sort of supervision. John, also 15, had stolen a gasmask from a cousin who had found refuge in shelters. He had had three jobs in one year, had earned too much money for his own good, and had gotten in bad company.

The prize of the lot was a real wartime victim, a handsome boy of 14. He had stolen a pound ($4) from his stepmother, partly because his friends had wartime wages, partly to spend, because he was angry at his step-parents for not letting him join the navy.

"Guess" Places Hong Kong Dead, Wounded 4,000

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—(CP)—Defence Minister Ralston Tuesday night disclosed in the House of Commons receipt Monday of a message which said casualties of the entire British force at Hong Kong, including Canadians, were at a "very rough guess" 4,000 killed and wounded.

The minister said it is estimated that the whole Hong Kong garrison would number about 12,000.

On the basis of the "very rough guess" in the message, previously received by the British war office, it was indicated about one-third of the garrison were casualties in the Japanese assault.

"THIRD OF STRENGTH"

Col. Ralston said that earlier the British embassy at Chungking had messaged that casualties among the Canadian troops at Hong Kong were difficult to estimate because communications with the Quebec Royal Rifles, one of the two Canadian regiments, had ceased.

The message then said: "Guess, but only guess one-third of fighting-strength killed, wounded or taken prisoner during fighting, remainder presumably taken prisoners on capitulation."

Some days ago it was announced that Canada's representation in the Hong Kong garrison was 1,885 officers and men, mostly members of the Winnipeg Grenadiers and the Royal Rifles.

Col. Ralston rose in the house to reply to statements attributed to Rev. B. C. Eckardt of London, Ont., in a Toronto newspaper yesterday morning. The report said Mr. Eckardt in a speech had "charged the King government with deliberately withholding the Hong Kong casualty list until after the Feb. 9 by-elections."

"ABSOLUTELY FALSE"

"The statement made by this reverend gentleman of Whitefriars, to the effect that information regarding casualty lists was being deliberately withheld until after the Feb. 9 by-elections is absolutely false," Col. Ralston said.

"I can state that no casualty lists have been received respecting the Canadian expeditionary force at Hong Kong except those which have already been published by the press."

Tax Exemptions Given Army Men

Edmontonians on active service have received tax exemptions amounting to $27,653 during 1941, it was reported Wednesday by Thomas Walker, city assessor. Exemptions granted in 1940 totalled $11,000.

Player's Mild Plain End cigarettes have "wet-proof" paper (process pat'd, 1941) which does not stick to the lips.

Liberal Urges Selective Plan Armed Services

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—(CP)—A plea to Prime Minister Mackenzie King to abandon the proposed conscription plebiscite and introduce a measure for selective compulsory service was made by one of his followers, Fred G. Hobiltzell (Lib., Toronto-Eglinton) in the House of Commons Tuesday night.

"I implore him not to besmirch the honor and dignity of this great dominion," Mr. Hobiltzell said.

That would be the effect if the government substituted uninformed public opinion for the leadership and integrity expected of it by the people, he said.

FIFTH TO OPPOSE

Mr. Hobiltzell, 50-year-old American-born business man and former crack amateur golfer, was the fifth of Mr. King's followers to oppose the plebiscite and the second to offer as an alternative immediate conscription.

Speaking in the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne last Tuesday, Mr. Hobiltzell said Canada did not have a total war effort.

FAIR URGES BONUS

Robert Fair (N.D., Battle River) urged that soldiers and their dependents and school teachers should receive the cost-of-living bonus.

The provincial governments were having difficulty in maintaining their educational systems but the dominion should increase grants to the provinces so the bonus could be paid to teachers.

Mr. Fair, on behalf of farmers, said that for some time Finance Minister Ilsley had been finding huge sums of money to pay war costs. If he could find money to pay "every cent" for munitions, he should be able to guarantee cost of production to farmers. If he had difficulty finding the funds the New Democracy members in the house could tell him how to do it.

He urged that representatives of organized farmers be given a place in all government bodies having to do with farm production, and that the Winnipeg Grain Exchange be closed for duration of the war.

CONDEMNS HEPBURN

Condemnation of Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario came from George T. Fulford (Lib. Leeds), his former close friend and supporter.

"Betrayal and treachery—that is what we see in the premier of Ontario today," said Mr. Fulford who supported Mr. Hepburn for more than three years in the Ontario legislature.

"I have my head in shame when I think that I was chairman of the meeting that chose Mitchell Hepburn to lead the Liberal party in Ontario," he said.

Mr. Fulford said the Ontario premier was responsible for Prime Minister Mackenzie King were "beneath contempt and an insult to the intelligence of the Canadian electorate."

Candidate Is Surprise For By - Election

By GRANT DEXTER

Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 4.—Nominations in the two Quebec by-elections brought one surprise candidate in Quebec East in the person of Paul Lalouche, a provincial civil servant. Mr. Lalouche is an anti-conscriptionist.

This nomination is surprising because it had been expected that a Conservative candidate would take the field.

In Quebec politics, it is pointed out, the nomination of numerous candidates is a long-accepted part of political warfare. Thus while the main contest in Quebec East is between Hon. Louis St. Laurent, minister of justice, and Paul Boucharad, Nationaliste, the presence of additional candidates is important because of the difference they may make in the poll of the major contestants. Nobody pretends that Mr. Latouche has much chance of winning.

LOYAL LIBERAL

Party strategists here incline to the view that Mr. Latouche is performing the part of a loyal Liberal. He is running as an anti-conscriptionist and his candidature will form an efficient catch-basin to retain Liberal votes which, because of conscription, will not be cast for Mr. St. Laurent. Otherwise they might pass to Mr. Bouchard. Liberals here think that a Conservative candidate would have been more desirable since he not only would have caught most of the disaffected Liberal ballots but might also have nicked Mr. Bouchard.

Mr. St. Laurent has yet to take to the platform. So far he has campaigned by radio. But he faces his first audience on Wednesday.

In St. Mary's division of Montreal, no Nationalist candidate was forthcoming. Dr. Gaspard Fauteux is the strong favorite here. He is opposed to conscription with the qualification that if a choice must be made as between Mr. King and Mr. Meighen, he favors the former.

manufacturing centre, were said to be pursuing the remnants of the 298th and 68th German infantry divisions southwestward. Mobile units cutting forward south of Kharkov were reported to have swept into Krasnopavlosk, 16 miles north of Lozovaya.

A high Russian military authority just returned from the front said that in many sectors the Germans appeared to have reached some sort of fortifications and were throwing fresh reserves of men and machines into a defensive stand, discarding their earlier tactics of withdrawing and at the same time rescuing as much material as possible.

Izvestia said: "Trying to step the pressure of the Red army, the enemy is introducing new reserves into the battle and is undertaking counter attacks. Our glorious fighters are repulsing these attacks, causing heavy losses, and are continuing their offensive."

Without geographical details, a midnight communique said the Red army continued its westward movement in most areas of the long winter front and levied a heavy toll of casualties.

ford Cripps, former ambassador to Russia, who had been widely forecast as supply minister but who, some commentators said, turned down that position as not suited to his capabilities.

PREDICT "SURPRISE"

One newspaper today predicted Sir Stafford would be named to a cabinet post "which will come as a complete surprise."

It was announced that the post of parliamentary and financial secretary to the admiralty, held by Sir Victor Warrander, has been divided into two jobs.

Sir Victor, who will be elevated to the peerage as a baron, will be parliamentary secretary and G. H. Hall, now colonial under secretary, will become the admiralty's financial secretary.

Succeeding Mr. Hall as colonial under secretary will be Harold MacMillan who is also made a member of the privy council.

Ralph Assheton succeeds Mr. MacMillan as parliamentary secretary to the minister of supply.

P. J. Noel Baker, a prominent Labor member of parliament, enters the government as parliamentary secretary to the ministry of war transport and will be the House of Commons spokesman for the minister, Lord Leathers.

M. S. McCorquodale becomes parliamentary secretary to the ministry of labor, succeeding Mr. Assheton.

Year-Round Use For University Now Advocated

opening in the last week of September and closing in the final week of April. Convocation is the middle of May. A summer school is held for five weeks, starting at the first of July, at which a number of individual university courses are given for school teachers.

Although, so far as is known, there is no recommendation in the survey report regarding the university's senate, the action of this body in denying the award of an honorary degree to Premier William Aberhart, minister of education, at the last convocation, has caused bitter comment by Social Credit members in the legislature and it is believed that changes in the senate will be effected by new legislation.

IS DENOUNCED

Warm denunciation of the senate's action, described as a "slight" and as "political" by the M.L.A.'s, featured the debate on the speech from the throne. It is altogether likely that amendments to the University Act will provide for changes in the establishment and powers of the senate.

Bowlen Charges Effective Debt Aid Is Lacking

The Social Credit government had failed to bring about effective debt settlement in the province because it has "aroused flagrant antagonism between the creditors and the debtors which did not help the debtors," J. J. Bowlen, Lib., Calgary, stated in an address on the debate on the speech from the throne in the legislature, Tuesday.

The Calgary member, a veteran of the legislature, devoted a large portion of his speech to a chiding of the government and in particular of Premier William Aberhart but, while mostly serious, he indulged in considerable good-natured banter which drew roars of laughter, as strong from the government benches as from his colleagues in the opposition.

PAYS TRIBUTE

In his opening remarks he paused to pay tribute to the late Maj. C. A. Lyndon, former livestock commissioner, who lost his life in the battle of Hong Kong. His eulogy of the late, respected civil servant, was applauded.

Noting the absence from the house of the premier, who had absented himself during recess, Mr. Bowlen said, "I am sorry the premier is not in his place and I would like to hear him speak in this debate. He always has some good stories and some good old hoary jokes." The Social Crediters rocked with mirth.

He spoke of the reference of the member for Willingdon to the reported "bolting" of himself and Hugh John Macdonald, K.C., Lib., Edmonton "We are as happy on this side of the house as ever and you will find us as strong as ever," he said.

"The premier used to say he had a thick hide,' he said, "but it must be getting thinner. He has handed out more insults than anyone in this house and he should be able to take some of them."

SUPPORT FOR LOAN

Stating that patriotism "seemed to be a touchy subject this session," he urged all the members to give every support to the Victory Loan which opens February 16. He cited figures on ship-building, the air training scheme and other phases of Canada's war effort, declaring that starting from nothing at the beginning of the war, Canada had "done wonders".

"Though our young member from Drumheller does not seem to know it," he said, "we have a prime minister and he is doing a wonderful job."

He made a reference to the Drumheller member's term of "blood money" in war contracts, stating the government ran as high as 80 per cent and excess profits tax also was 80 per cent. "You will see that it is difficult to make many millions on war contracts," he said. With these taxes, he added, the country "hardly needs" conscription for wealth.

ENDORSES FARMERS

Relating the recent monetary reform convention in Winnipeg, Mr. Bowlen read a report of the introduction of Premier Aberhart on the speaking platform by A. J. Hooke, S.C., Rocky Mountain, who was described as saying: "We would almost give up our lives for him (Mr. Aberhart)—would we not, Mr. Lovick?"

"And then," Mr. Bowlen continued, "it is reported that Mr. Low replied, 'Oh yeah!'" The provincial treasurer was convulsed as he joined the members in a gale of laughter.

Mr. Bowlen spoke warm words of endorsation of the pleas of the 400 farmers now in Ottawa seeking a higher price for wheat. "I'm all with them," he said, "we could can raise wheat at present prices, and a great many of them haven't got livestock and can't keep livestock."

Speaking of "monetary reform," he said he didn't think many of the Social Credit M.L.A.'s really believed in this theory, but added that he believed in reform generally and that reforms were now being made every day. "We shall see changes in the next two or three years, which we need and which we wouldn't have had for 50 years if it hadn't been for this war," he said.

Trade, the Ontario Motor League and the National Club.

In 1910 he established his present firm and later spread over Canada by opening five branches.

He began his business career as an office boy in the old Toronto News in the year 1892. He used to tell of being promoted to operating a typesetting machine at the News when a strike of typesetters was on, and of being active in the cause he was "too good"—made more money than the ordinary typesetter, and was therefore regarded as a disturbing influence.

Then he resolved to be an advertising man.

He worked for the Canadian Advertising Agency, but it closed down. Later the management of the Vapo-Cresolene Company offered him the post of supervising their advertising throughout the British empire.

Not long after he took the position he was persuaded to establish his own company in Toronto.

The Defence Of Canada

The whole coastal area of British Columbia, for a considerable distance inland, has been declared to be a protected area. Within such an area alien enemies may reside only if and so long as the police do not suspect them of treachery. Two thousand Japanese nationals will accordingly be moved out of the coastal zone. But where they are to be moved is a question of some difficulty, for the reason that they are not wanted in any other part of Canada. Unless they can be allowed to earn a living in some practically unpopulated district, they may end up in an internment camp, living at the public expense.

At Ottawa, one of the British Columbia members proposed that General McNaughton be brought back from Britain to organize Canada's defences, which in effect means the defences of British Columbia.

These are healthy signs of recognition that Canada's position has been changed, to the point of being reversed, by the extension of the war to the Pacific ocean and the land areas fronting it. British Columbia, like Australia, is now a potential battlefield. The war is no longer remote in distance, and may not be remote in time, from the homes of this Dominion. At present the enemy is busy in the South Pacific, and likely to be still busier there. But he has ample reserves of men and ships, and it may seem good tactics to create a diversion by launching an invasion attempt against our western shores.

This possibility is very real. Nothing is to be gained by getting panicky about it. But the threat should be taken seriously, and all necessary means used both to stiffen our coastal defences and to prevent fifth column activities — without which Japanese forces could not have made such headway in Thailand and Malaya. Tokyo did not have to go to Berlin to learn either trickery or the advantages of a surprise attack.

It is reassuring that the ugly facts of the new situation are being recognized.

Sugar

It may interest—and profit—readers to know what exactly are the restrictions imposed upon them by the order of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board respecting the purchase and use of sugar. Here are the mandatory clauses of the order:

"Ration" means three-quarters of a pound of sugar per person per week.

"No person shall in any week purchase or otherwise acquire a greater amount of sugar for personal or household consumption than two weeks' ration of sugar for such person and each person in his household;

"No person shall purchase any sugar for personal or household consumption if he and the other persons in his household together have in their possession or control more than two weeks' ration of sugar;

"No person shall in any week use more sugar for personal and household consumption, including home cooking and preserving, than the quantity of the ration defined in this Order; provided, however, that, in the case of a household of two or more persons, it shall be sufficient compliance with the requirements of this paragraph if the consumption of sugar by all persons in his household is not greater than the aggregate amount of the individual ration of each person in his household."

Farmers and others living far from stores may purchase more than the stipulated amounts at one time, provided the consumption restrictions are observed. Special regulations may be made during the canning and preserving season. Hospitals and other public institutions, and individuals for cause, may obtain permits to use more than the stated amounts. A retailer may refuse to sell sugar if he thinks the purchaser is trying to evade these regulations, but is not compelled to do so. The penalties for buying or using more than the amounts specified are severe, running even to a fine of $5,000.

For the time the public are put upon honor to thus help conserve the supplies, which are at present ample but certain to diminish; enforcement machinery not having been created. But behind the appeal stands full authority to investigate, search premises, and punish. Where patriotism fails, the penalty is liable to fall at any time.

The Railways

In the gloomy days of the last decade, when trucks and busses began to swarm on the public highways and trains grew short and few, a fairly general impression got abroad that the railways had served their turn, were being out-moded, might in a generation be quite useless, and were no longer really essential.

But this notion vanished on September 3rd, 1939. There is now a clear and general understanding that Canada could not have carried on its war effort on any comparable scale if it had not had the assistance of its widely extended railway lines, well-conditioned, well-managed and equipped with ample rolling stock. Nobody has proposed during the last two years that railway lines be torn up—despite the urgent need of steel.

Remembering the persistent campaign to "scrap" feeder lines and pioneer lines and even sections of main line—which was under way even five years ago, this sudden cessation of the "economy" clamor is significant. There is a reason, and it is to be found in the services which the railways have been giving and are giving in this time of national emergency—services which no other agency could give.

Mr. R. C. Vaughan, president of the National Railways, told a Montreal audience in detail on Monday what these services have been and are, and a summary of his address has been published. The facts sum up to the surprising result that the railways are now handling sixty per cent more traffic than they handled in the peak year of the former Great War.

Had the railways been less extended or less efficient this of course could not be the case. From the production of raw materials in out-of-the-way places to the maintenance of air training fields in isolated localities and the moving of men in thousands to points of embarkation, the national war effort would have been hampered and crippled but for the railway transportation standing ready for use when the need came.

What ailed the railways ten years ago was not that they had out-lived their usefulness, but that the country was stagnant and did not produce the traffic they were able to handle and needed to do their knit.

Not the least interesting piece of information given out by Mr. Vaughan is that, while the railways last year got $52,000,000 less than they would have got in 1939 for carrying the same number of passengers and tons of freight, they had a satisfactory financial return. In the case of the National system, with all charges met, there was a balance of net earnings at the end of last year amounting to four million dollars.

Traffic made the difference.

Rommel's new offensive has rolled eastward past Bengasi and Barce, halfway to the border of Egypt. This strengthens the probability that equipment—and perhaps Australian troops also—has been sent from Libya to Singapore. The few weeks ago equipment needed at Singapore was sent to Libya and Russia. With supplies still limited, planes and tanks have to go where they are most urgently needed, even if this means risk or setback in the area denied or denuded.

Nobody In America Bothered To Report Hitler's Speech

Considered Address Unimportant; Full Text Not Available to North America

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

It was my desire to comment on Hitler's speech delivered in Berlin last Friday.

Obviously this speech is of the greatest importance in revealing what Mr. Hitler thought it worth while to tell the German people and the world. It is the first he has delivered since October 2nd—the first he has made since the reverses in Russia, and the entrance of the United States into the war.

Dorothy Thompson

It is also his first speech since the shake-up among the generals and dismissal of Brauchitsch. Time and again this column has received enlightenment from careful study of Hitler's speeches, constantly asking the question, "Why does he say just that, and why does he fail to mention this or that?"

We have very little news from Germany, and we have to analyze every scrap of authentic information. Hitler's speeches are immensely important—not because he tells the truth, but because he is always responsive to the feelings in the German nation. He never makes a policy to fit his propaganda, but a propaganda to fit the situation. So, from his speeches one can see whether he is tacking right or left, whether he is playing off conservatives or radicals, whether the German nation is enthusiastic or depressed.

And all his speeches reveal the line of propaganda for his agents throughout the world.

Political Warfare

Now we are at war, and that war must be waged not only at the front but in the political and psychological sphere. Hitler is a master of this form of warfare. An immense staff of expert workers, with pedantic thoroughness and perfect timing, assist him to know all about his enemies.

Goebbels answers instantaneously every speech of Churchill or Roosevelt.

Not an editorial adverse to the policy or personality of Roosevelt but finds its way to the point where it can be used. (And how effectively used we have seen in the United States). For Hitler studies the internal political and social structure of the countries of his enemies, and looks for the weak points to make his breakthrough.

The moment war was declared, it seemed obvious that we would have a brilliant psychological warfare. The American press, and especially those members of it who had spent years following most carefully the developments in Germany, studying the inner structure of the Nazi party, and the divergencies in policy between the various tendencies in this movement and the nation would be able to contribute in a co-ordinated way, to turning Hitler's own weapons on himself.

Since I have studied Hitler for nearly twenty years, I should like now to have contributed to the understanding of his situation now.

Unreported

But I cannot comment on the Hitler speech, for I cannot find out what he said. Fantastic as it may seem, there is not, in the entire city of New York a complete German or English translation of this speech. And editorials have been written and comments made on what the writer thinks he said—and sometimes on what he did not say.

But things simply cannot go on like this. We are fighting two enemies who understand organization, and timing and for whom not the smallest detail is unimportant. And we are disorganized, uninterested, lackadaisical, and operating on guess work. We think it is not important to be thorough, and to know things exactly, and to use them with the most penetrating intelligence.

This is a little incident, but it's exactly like Pearl Harbor.

Leaders With Courage

Editor, Bulletin: No doubt you are aware that Canada is at war. If not, one of these days or nights you may wake up and find the country is blown up.

Yet we have a Prime Minister asking the people if a plebiscite or conscription.

He told us in his election speeches, "Vote for me and there shall be no conscription," plainly showing he thought more of his position than the country.

He is afraid to take control and say that all men must shoulder arms and fight for their country.

Where would England be today if she had a man of Hitler's weak character? We can't all have a Churchill, we know, but surely there is one man who has courage enough to stand and defy the enemy. The whole world is watching Canada today.

Victory Loan Drive

Editor, Bulletin: During the last Victory Loan campaign considerable resentment was expressed because many young canvassers of military age were telling people their patriotic duty.

Another cause of resentment was that many of these canvassers pretended they were giving their services freely when, in reality, commissions were being paid.

I have heard that some experienced salesmen, beyond military age, have offered their services for the coming campaign and have been told they are not wanted because there will be fewer canvassers this time.

Now, does this means that a plan is afoot to cool the commission among fewer people?

Why not clear the atmosphere and play the game with everyone? There should be no favorites.

Ireland's Tragic Position

Domestic Politics Mixed Up With Protest Against Arrival of U. S. Troops

By HAROLD L. WEIR

President de Valera's emphatic protest against the despatch of United States troops to Northern Ireland was no formal pronouncement made for the sake of the record. For the American expeditionary force in Ulster is regarded by de Valera and his government as an aggression against Ireland and a violation of Irish territory.

Harold L. Weir

By sending American troops to Irish soil, the United States has tacitly supported the British government's policy of recognizing the legal separation of the North from the South. That is to say, the Irish government feels that the United States is prolonging partition and giving its blessing to Britain's Irish policy.

Those are the grounds upon which Eire's premier based his protest in the United States.

It would be wrong to read the protest as the face-saving device of a neutral statesman anxious to prevent the Axis from using the Americans' presence as an excuse for invasion.

It was undoubtedly necessary for the record to be put straight by a formal protest, but it goes deeper than that and has the approval, apparently, of the entire Irish government.

Eire Incensed

Lord Beaverbrook's revelation of the fact that the Americans were sent to Ulster at the express desire of Mr. Churchill increases rather than diminishes Eire's resentment. Dublin seems to feel that the fact that Irish government was not consulted in advance is another ground for complaint.

As a matter of fact, Eire was only notified the day the troops arrived. It was left to the British to inform the Eire government, presumably because the American troops are under the British high command. The American minister in London himself had not been informed officially of the impending arrival of the force.

In interpreting Eire's attitude in this question, two basic factors must be considered.

One is the firm belief of de Valera's government, shared by many of the Irish people, that, in fact, de Valera's words, "maintenance of the partition of Ireland is as indefensible as aggression against all nations which it is the avowed purpose of Great Britain and the United States in this war to bring to an end."

The second is the determinaiton of the Irish government and most of the Irish people to maintain neutrality.

To people of belligerent countries convinced that they are fighting the forces of evil, the Irish attitude towards neutrality may seem to amount almost to a fetish. But to Irishmen in the South it is one of the fundamental articles of their faith, and one of their principle aims of existence.

Anything which may force Eire into the war or violate Irish neutrality is thus regarded as something to be avoided. Some Irishmen argue that the entry of the United States into the war, for instance, offers the Germans an excuse to invade. Others are fearful lest the A.E.F. is the forerunner of an American occupation of Eire.

There is widespread uneasiness that the assembly of United States troops may be used as a threat, combined with economic pressure, to induce Eire to hand over bases to Britain or the United States.

De Valera has stated, as recently as Jan. 17, that no pressure has been brought to bear by either country. That does not relieve anxiety that pressure may not be used.

Eire's rulers are determined not to give way no matter how great the pressure or how attractive the conditions may become.

While some members of the government speak of the resentment felt by the Irish at the A.E.F. in Ulster, the location of the public appears to be more one of uneasiness than that the A.E.F. should move into Eire.

Some, it is true, feel with McGillicuddy, Nationalist member of the Ulster parliament from Londonderry, that the Americans in Ulster are the same as though the Japs went into occupied France alongside the Germans. That feeling is most rare.

Opposition View

Few people in Eire it appears mind the Americans' presence in the North so long as they do not use the facilities. Members of the Dail have said that their constituents felt that way.

James Dillon, deputy leader of the Cosgrove (opposition) party, who is regarded by the government as pro-British, has expressed relief at the Americans' arrival.

"I expect the Germans to invade," he said, "and I am glad to know that there are troops in the North who will come to our assistance."

His views definitely are not shared by the government nor by all members of his party.

While the government is aware that the defense of Eire will be most difficult should it be invaded, it feels that Eire's position has slightly improved lately with the receipt of some arms purchased from British.

Eire would like more.

Contrary to rumors circulating in Ulster and in Britain, the Irish government has made no deal with Britain or the United States and, so far as it is possible to ascertain, has no intention of doing so.

De Valera is not a man to compromise.

On the other hand, he has lived up to his promise of benevolent neutrality.

The broadcasting companies took down the "high-lights," by rapid translators at listening posts. It is absolutely impossible to do this accurately. Mrs. McCormick, in the Times, presumably commented on the C.B.S. version—a version that I received myself. In that version a startling statement appeared. "President Roosevelt will be spoken of as the creator of the greatest empire"—which Mrs. McCormick noted. I doubted this statement and so went to C.B.S. and had the Ediphone recording (very difficult for anyone not entirely expert by ear) played back. Hitler never said anything of the sort.

The A.P. carried the Transocean version, the one put out by the German government. In every case where I have checked, these versions have been mistranslated, eliptical, and misleading. Even from what I know of the speech from checked back versions from the broadcasting companies. Transocean eliminates some of the most revealing parts.

Reuter—the British Service—carried by the New York Times—brought thirty minutes out of a speech that took one hour and fifty-three minutes.

Tass, the Russian agency, had only the broadcasting company's inaccurate highlights.

No Complete Text

We have a Co-ordinator of Information, with New York offices, from which emanate broadcasts for our political warfare on Germany and elsewhere.

The Co-ordinator of Information had no complete text, by Saturday noon.

The Mutual Shortwave Broadcasting Room "didn't think we recorded the speech—weren't particularly interested."

There is a copy in the country. The F.C.C. in Washington say they have it. The Co-ordinator of Information more than twenty-four hours after the speech was delivered, hopes to get it. And if and when I get it, I will try to analyze it and not until then.

Census Compels Parliamentary Changes

Increase in Quebec's Population Will Reduce Representation of Other Provinces

By B. T. RICHARDSON

OTTAWA.—The shift in distribution of Canadian population disclosed by figures from the census division of the bureau of statistics marks historic changes in the political and economic structure of this country.

As Hon. J. A. MacKinnon, minister of trade and commerce, pointed out in releasing the figures to the house, they make parliamentary redistribution on the basis of 1942, whatever the changes of constituency boundaries may involve, a reduction in membership of three seats in Manitoba and four in Saskatchewan.

This change results in the balance between east and west, between which, a conflict on tariff and other economic policies has existed for years. It creates also a shift between the English-speaking and French-speaking groups in parliament, for the net loss of seven members will come out of the province representation which is largely English-speaking.

The changes in parliamentary representation therefore affect the continuing position of the prairies in the seat of sovereign power in Ottawa. The position of Quebec has been strengthened. The French-speaking province contains 29 per cent of the Canadian population compared with 27.6 per cent in 1931.

Representation

The question of parliamentary representation is of immediate interest. The western provinces have not in the past decade kept step with the general growth of Canadian population. There may be Ontario, though that province has avoided some consolation in the fact that neither losing representation in parliament by virtue of provisos against reduced membership contained in the B.N.A. act.

The provisos did not prove sufficient to save Manitoba and Saskatchewan from a loss but they did save Alberta which on the basis of population alone would suffer loss of two seats.

The basis of parliamentary representation, as every school child has been taught, is the 65 members allotted to Quebec by the constitution. Thus in 1931 the population of Quebec was reported to be 2,874,-255, exclusive of Indians, giving a unit of representation of 44,186. The 1941 census showed a Quebec population of 3,317,241, giving a unit of representation of 51,034.

Provisos

To find out the representation to which each province is entitled, divide its population by 51,034. But the matter does not end there, and two conditional provisions exist. One was added in 1915 by the Borden government, providing that no province shall have fewer members than it has senators.

So the absolute minimum house membership is the number of senators appointed for the province. Thus the maritime provinces of Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick are reduced to that minimum already in representation, as fixed by the B.N.A. Act and its amendments, follow:

1. Ontario—24 senators.
2. Quebec—24 senators.
3. Maritime provinces—24 senators, distributed P.E.I., N.S., 10; and N.B. 10.
4. Western provinces—24 senators, distributed six each to Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

This set-up dates from 1915, and there would be a case, if the western provinces cared to argue it, for greater western representation in the senate. Actually western opinion is more pronounced than that in any other section of Canada against the senate.

Modified Rule

There is another clause, Sec. 51 (4) in the original B.N.A. Act that provides that no province shall lose membership in the house of commons unless its population, as shown by census, has been reduced in proportion to the entire Canadian population by one-seventieth from the proportion existing in the previous census.

In practice, this proviso considerably modifies the strict population basis of representation. Ontario, for instance, would lose eight members as a result of its 1941 census standing, but under Sec. 51 (4) it is entitled to retain its present membership of 82.

The representation to which each province would be entitled on the basis of population is shown in an accompanying tabulation, along with actual membership in house and senate, the proportion each province represents in the whole and the change occurring in that proportion between 1931 and 1941.

Several Changes

In the past there have been several important changes in the parliamentary balance as a result of census reports. In 1896, for instance, Ontario had 92 members and its group rose to a record of 92 and may in the future come down further to the basic Quebec level of 65 members.

Such a balance would bring important changes in the political character of parliament.

Taking a longer view, Professor Frank Scott, in "Canada Today," forecast that by 1971 the French-Canadian element of the population would outnumber that of British descent and that a progressive extension of French influence in Canada could be expected. The 1941 census bears out this view, and the trend apparently can be reversed only by increased immigration or by the increased birth rate among British-speaking citizens.

There is a constitutional provision that parliamentary membership must be adjusted to the figures returned with the proviso mentioned, though the readjustment will not take effect until the end of the present parliament.

Under Sec. 51 (4) of the B.N.A. Act, no province shall suffer loss of membership in the house of commons unless the proportion of its population to the total of Canada as a whole is diminished by five per cent or more. The three prairie provinces along with Prince Edward Island and Ontario suffered a loss of proportion, but the loss in Saskatchewan was 12.4 per cent, that in Manitoba 6.2 per cent.

The change of Alberta's position was only minus two per cent, and in Ontario's position, minus 5 per cent, so these provinces avoided losing house membership otherwise justified on the basis of proportionate population.

A striking fact of the census is that only Saskatchewan suffered an absolute loss of population between 1931 and 1941.

Clothes Ration

CARDIFF WESTERN MAIL

A British woman with six months' clothing coupons can buy a suit, a long-sleeved woollen dress and two pairs of stockings. In Germany the same number of coupons would buy only an unlined artificial jacket and one pair of stockings.

In Italy they would represent only a dress and a pair of shoes of the poorest quality, probably made of paper, straw, or glass.

For a man six months' coupons in Britain would buy a suit, a vest, and a pair of socks; in Germany they would buy only a pair of trousers, a vest and socks; or in Italy a suit of very poor quality, and shirt, which would not last long.

An official of the Ministry of Economic Warfare produced a suit recently sold in Norway made of cloth which was 75 per cent rayon and cotton and a shirt, estimated to be worth not more than 7s 11d in Britain, which was sold in Germany for 30s.

He showed a pair of trousers for which a Norwegian had paid five guineas—this at the rate of 16 guineas for a complete suit—made of a kind of sacking.

The opening bids and responses, together with slam bidding after a four no trump call, have been pretty well standardized into a few well-known systems. But bidding tactics for the part of the auction between these two extremes is still any man's land. There are many systems and ideas contending for general acceptance as to this intermediate range.

Al Weiss of New York, a player well on his way of becoming a senior master, recommends linking the early responses to a system of slam bidding. In his system, the response to an opening two-bid is based on controls: in fact, all subsequent bids by the partner of the opening bidder must endeavor to show what the hand holds in first and second round controls, even third round if time permits.

After an opening bid of two of a suit, the responding hand must bid two go trump if he holds no ace. But he may jump to three no trump with one and one-half honor tricks but no ace. Likewise he may jump to four of the original suit with long strong support but no ace. With one or more aces, he must commence bidding the suits of the aces, starting with the ace of the opener's suit if he has it.

Today's hand shows how the information South needs to bid six hearts.

Notice that with his freak hand, South needs to know exactly what North's high cards are, because top clubs would not help his hand, and anything less than the ace in spades would be useless.

Looking them Over

By JACK KELLY

JUST sniping at random:

The rink of the day as the bonspiel advances into its third day of play is George Sjolie's crew from Camrose. By beating the highly favored Rose of Sedgewick and Cliff Manahan of the Royal, the Camrose squad found themselves in the middle of the spotlight. Bill Duggan is leading, Julius Odegard playing second and Arnold Anderson third.

The showing of Sjolie is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that this is the second time that he has skipped a rink in the Edmonton bonspiel. His players have all had several years experience, but none of them classify as veterans. Mrs. Sjolie is also an able skip and has made a fine showing here in the women's bonspiels.

If you think movie stars don't have to learn a lot at times, consider the case of Gary Cooper who has been given the role of Lou Gehrig in the forthcoming movie picturing the life of baseball's iron man Cooper, who hails from Montana, knew nothing whatever about baseball and Coach Lefty O'Doul is working day and night on him to develop enough style to be convincing in the picture. Gary couldn't bat, catch or throw left-handed as Gehrig did.

Pearl Harbor Will Gallop

FRED KLEES, registrar of the Jockey Club, governing body of the U.S. turf, reports that he has been flooded with requests for the name "Pearl Harbor" for colts in need of baptism. George B. McCaney of Fort Worth was the first to get in his request for this historic name and was accordingly awarded it.

West Texas State basketball team is a nightmare for other college squads to face in the current U.S. cage strife. To be specific, the nightmare is Charley Halbert, the West Texas center who is exactly six feet 10 inches tall. In a recent game against Long Island University, Halbert punched 10 L.I.U. shots out of the Texas hoop by getting under it and jumping upward.

Speaking of U.S. basketball, experts estimate that there are at least 6,000 men playing the game in the United States. From this army, it is proposed to pick an all-star team of five. This seems to be carrying the silly all-star craze to the absolute ultimate in ridiculousness.

Bowling Entry Sets Record

THE war has not hurt the annual tourney of the American Bowling Congress. The big kegling festival got out to an early start in Columbus, Ohio, until March 3, but already 4,900 outside teams have entered—an all-time record. The previous high was 4,687 teams at St. Paul in 1941.

Vancouver will have the distinction of sending a team the longest distance to the Columbus meet, while Winnipeg will be the farthest north point represented.

Bowlers in Cincinnati have started a stunt that should appeal to keglers here in Edmonton. The stunt is called the "Lucky Seventh". Each player in a game chips in a nickel and the man who rolls the best score in the seventh frame gets the pot in war saving stamps. Perfect score for one frame is considered 30.

The A.B.C. headquarters announce that U. S. bowling leagues and tournaments already have purchased $345,000 in defence bonds and stamps. It's a tidy little sum that wouldn't have reached the nation's war coffers in any other voluntary form.

French Boxers Lose Meat Grant

ANDRE LENGLET'S being tossed from the ring in Paris was tough on boxers in France. They had complained that they could not train properly on the amount of meat prescribed by ration cards.

Special privileges were granted them, but these were rescinded when Heavyweight Lenglet was chucked from the premises and the affair was called no-contest.

Lenglet was essaying a comeback despite the loss in battle of all the toes on one foot which prevents him from keeping his balance.

Ritchie Again Beaten 2-1

Highlands Juvenile Club Takes Community League Title

Highlands juveniles captured the championship of their divison of Federation of Community Leagues hockey when they defeated Ritchie 2-1 for their second straight win on Tuesday night.

The Highlands squad took the first game of the best two-in-three playoff series for the title on Ritchie's home rink last Thursday by by the same score and they will no doubt challenge the winner of the Edmonton Juvenile League for city honors.

Last night's encounter was another nip and tuck affair, with the two teams deadlocked going the third period. It was Roy Green's goal in the last few minutes that settled the issue and Bob Myers set up the play for the winning marker.

Ritchie took the lead in the first canto, Lawrence Nugent coming through on an unassisted effort, and the game remained at 1-0 until well into the next session when George Radiha evened the count with the help of Murray Senko.

The coach of the champion Highlands juveniles is Frank Adby and Earl Hay looks after the managerial duties.

Buckna Continues Set Fast Pace In A.B.C. Circuit

CALGARY, Feb. 4—(CP)—Mike Buckna, elusive Trail winger, was within striking range of Eddie O'Keefe's point-getting record today, according to statistics released by F. J. Cameron, president of the A.B.C. Hockey League.

Mike has 50 points, just 12 short of the former Edmonton playmaker's mark of 62, which he established last year. Buckna has scored 22 goals and made the plays for 28 others. He collected four points during the week as Trail made a successful trip of the prairies.

Maurice Duffy, Buckna's teammate, boosted his total to 44 to hold second place, just one point ahead of Dune Grant of the Calgary Stampeders. Ab Cronie, who didn't take the prairie trip, is still in third spot with 38, one point ahead of Doug Cairns, Calgary. Les Thirwell, Calgary, gained four points to lift his total to 36.

Duffy and Grant are tied for goal-scoring honors with 26 apiece, while Buckna is leading in the assist department with 28. Cronie is just one behind.

Believe It Or Not— —By Robt Ripley

EXPLANATION OF TODAY'S CARTOON

FIRST AMERICAN PRESIDENT: The first American President was Pedro de la Gasca (1485-1567), who was sent to the New World by Charles V of Spain, in 1545, to deal with the rebellion of Gonzalo Pizarro. He was equipped with full powers and the title of Presidente de la Audiencia Real (President of the Royal Tribunal). This is the first time that the term "president" appears in the New World. Gasca was succeeded by other Presidentes who wielded great power. The title impressed itself so powerfully upon the American consciousness in the succeeding centuries as to suggest itself to the authors of the American constitution, when the time came to select a title for a chief magistrate of the nation, and all the other republics of the world followed suit.

Hawks' Overtime Goals Beat Bruins

N.Y. Rangers Move To Top By Outlasting Amerks 3-2

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(AP)—New York Rangers took sole possession of first place in the National Hockey League Tuesday night with an overtime 3-2 victory over Brooklyn Americans. The New Yorkers also won possession once again of the William J. McBeth trophy, emblem of the inter-borough supremacy.

It yas the Rangers' fifth victory this year over Brooklyn, against one loss, and was scored on a quick thrust in the first half minute of overtime when Alan Kuntz for his second time in the night finished off a three-man rush with a neat goal.

The fifth-place Americans spotted the Rangers two goals in the first period, by Kuntz and Alex Shibicky, then caught them early in the third period. Bill Summerhill beat Goalie Jim Henry in the second period and Norman Larson in the third.

The game was spotted with minor fights, none of which Referee Bill Chadwick thought serious enough for major penalties. Bill Juzda and Bill Benson staged one; Babe Pratt and Tommy Anderson another.

The Americans introduced Jack Church of Toronto on their defence and at his play helped lighten up the support given Goalie Charley Rayner. It was announced that Defenceman Andy Branigan has been returned to Springfield Indians.

A crowd of 11,188 attended. It was designated Brooklyn night and Manager Leo Durocher of the Brooklyn baseball Dodgers tossed in the puck.

VETERAN WINGER SCUTTLES BOSTON

BOSTON, Feb. 4.—(AP)—Little Mush March, the National Hockey League's oldest winger, rapped in the tying and winning goals while his Chicago Black Hawks were outbattling Boston Bruins for a 5-3 overtime victory Tuesday night before 9,500 at the Boston Garden. Red Hamill, a recent Bruin, also scored twice for the victors.

All of Bruins tallies were registered before Sam Lo Presti, the Chicago goalie, was felled by a close-up shot fired by Bobby Bauer during the 17th minute of second period play. The blow opened a deep gash over Lo Presti's eye. Six stitches were required to close the wound.

Before his injury, which must have been a severe handicap during the last 32 minutes, Lo Presti was beaten by Woody Dumart, Gordie Bruce, called up from the Hershey American League farm, along with Defenceman Jack Shewchuk, and Milt Schmidt. Meanwhile Johnny Mariucci and Hamill had countered through Frankie Brimsek.

March put the Black Hawks into a 3-3 tie during the 13th minute of the third period and the little veteran scored again early in the overtime which ended shortly after Hamil blasted through Brimsek for the second time in the game.

Cam Burke Quits Lethbridge Leafs

LETHBRIDGE, Feb. 4—(CP)—Officials of the Lethbridge Maple Leafs hockey team, holders of second place in the A.B.C. Senior Hockey League, announced Tuesday that Cam Burke, centre player on the squad's second line, had asked for and has been granted his release.

Burke, who played for Calgary Stampeders and wound up as the second highest scorer in the Alberta senior circuit last season, said officials he has been unable to find sufficient time away from business to permit him to train properly. Officials felt it was in the best interests of the team that connections be severed and gave him his release.

The 27-year-old forward was a standout player with Stampeders for several seasons and his acquisition by the Leafs came about as a result of business affiliations in southern Alberta. He amassed a total of 81 points last year, made up of 27 goals and 54 assists.

Double Dead Heat At Havana

HAVANA, Feb. 4—(AP)—A double dead heat—about as rare an event as a race-track finish camera can record—was marked up in the third race at Oriental Park Tuesday. Miss Sokolo, ridden by H. Noriega, and Arvos Queen, with F. Fernandez up, finished the 5½-furlong dash in dead heat for first place. About a length and a half behind them, on Wisconsin and Hicken Lady ran a dead heat for third money. Miss Sokolo and Arvos Queen both were 4 to 1 in the betting.

Flyers And Leafs Continue Advance City Midget Loop

Those surprising Stadium Flyers did the victory roll again on Tuesday night, their victims this time being the Canadians and the figures read 8-2. The Maple Leafs kept in front of the City Midget pack by swamping E.A.C. 7-1.

In their game at the Stadium rink, the Canadians got away with a two-goal start, Nazurachuk and McKee scoring in the first few minutes, with Emberg and LeClair drawing assists.

From then on however the Flyers took charge, with Moore acting as squadron leader and being credited with three goals and a pair of assists.

Barry, who bagged a pair of markers, started the Flyers on their victorious flight with a last minute counter in the first session. Binkie being in on the play.

Moore scored three in succession in the second period and the Flyers added four more in the third canto. Fomaniuk from Algoe and Moore; O'Connor unassisted, Algoe from Moore and Barry from Lavallee and Binkie are the official score-keeper's entries.

Maple Leafs had things pretty much their own way in their 7-1 win over E.A.C. at 119 Street rink. McPherson scored twice in the first period. Christian and Weaver setting up the plays and Thomas made it 3-0.

Chapman combined with Cavanagh for the E.A.C. counter at the beginning of the second period and the Leafs came back with three. Christian from Thomas, Thomas from Christian and McPherson from Dobbie was the way the goals went in.

Wetaskiwin Plays Canadians Tonight

Wetaskiwin Colonels and Canadians will furnish tonight's hockey attraction at the 119 Street rink with the game starting at 8:30.

The Colonels are shaping up as serious contenders for the Alberta Intermediate title and in view of past performances of the two clubs, tonight's game should be a closely contested affair.

Sports . . . . Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4—(AP)—Inside report is that Billy Conn and Manager Johnny Ray aren't actually near a bust-up as has been rumored but they have been exchanging some pretty hot words about Billy's refusal to train . . . Conn heads for New York today to start work for Tony Zale.

Not a dark horse

Greg Rice, who will be shooting for his 39th consecutive victory in the Millrose track meet Saturday, won't have to worry about the possibility of a blackout during the race . . . he trains at night on the Columbia University outdoor track.

Hot stove warmup

Minor league baseballers, who formerly could hardly wait for spring training and free grub, now are complaining because the training season is too long. It will take a lot of them off high-pay defence jobs . . . Joe McCarthy says he isn't worrying about his night game pitchers but he'd like to know who is his best night-game hitter. . . . Leo Durocher, trapped in a hotel lobby talking to four umpires, explaining: "I never gave them any trouble." He was right. All four were American Leaguers.

Daily Double Pays $1,709.80

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 4—(AP)—A daily double playoff of $1,709.80—one of the largest of the season—was made at Hialeah Park Tuesday when long shots came home in the first and second races.

Joe Burger, winner of the first, closed at $27 for $2, while Portwatch's triumph in the second was worth $60.90.

Only 11 tickets were sold on the combination.

"Shill" Retains Old Shooting Eye

TORONTO, Feb. 4—(CP)—Dillon Brady of Hamilton Majors retains a slight lead over his teamate, Clarence Shillington in the O.H.A. Senior "A" series scoring race. Brady was 39 points—two points more than Shillington. Shillington formerly played with North Battleford Beavers.

AFTER Dunkerque! . . . After Greece! . . . After Crete! . . . And now . . . after the disasters at Hong Kong and Malaya—is there a person in Alberta, or in Canada, who still believes in "wishing"? Is there a person who thinks that just "hoping" will put weapons in the hands of our forces?

● Granted the courage and tenacity of our fighting men are second to none. Granted, too, we have the world's largest sources of raw materials . . . These Factors Alone are not sure foundations for the belief that all will end in our favor.

● It is time to throw off the cloak of complacency! The time has arrived for action on the part of every last one of us!

● Many already have made great sacrifices, but the record tells us it is not enough. We can definitely do more — and we MUST do more!

● In addition to the monthly purchase of War Savings Certificates, we can save every scrap of material useful in manufacturing weapons and supplies, and assist in assembling it for easy salvage.

● There are many auxiliary organizations doing great work for our total war effort and they will be glad of your help. Indeed, you can find no end of things to do, and if we all get into this work right now, the day of VICTORY will be hastened.

Prepare for Greater Action

Now that our coastlines are actually part of the farflung battle front . . . now that we have had further demonstrations of treachery and ruthlessness of the enemy, there should be few in Alberta who cannot grasp the seriousness of the situation. No one can escape the fact that nothing short of an all-out war effort on the part of every individual will win this war.

"Speaking for a few of the boys, the 7th, 8th, and 9th Tank Corps and the 91st and 92nd Divisions, we'd each like your autograph!"

McNaughton Has Confidence In Canada Troops

OTTAWA, Feb. 4—(CP)—Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, "perfectly satisfied" with Canada's troops overseas and confident the Dominion's home defences are "in good hands," is in Canada for a few weeks of consultation with defence authorities before resuming command of the Canadian Corps in Great Britain.

With him came Mrs. McNaughton—who goes back to Britain when he returns—and these high-ranking Canadian army officers:

Maj.-Gen. J. C. Murchie of Edmundston, N.B., who is to become vice-chief of the general staff.

Maj.-Gen. J. P. Mackenzie of Vancouver, new quartermaster-general. He has been in command of the divisional engineers of a Canadian division overseas.

General McNaughton told newsmen he had taken the opportunity to return to Canada when his doctors advised he rest up three or four weeks before resuming active command in the lines. He planned to return to his job within a month.

In Canada, he planned to confer on "many administrative matters" with Defence Minister Ralston, Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, chief of the general staff, and other officials. He also was anxious to inspect the army's basic training system in this country with a view of meshing it even more closely with the training of the troops in Britain.

Gen. McNaughton said he left his troops "perfectly satisfied" with them. "They are in very fine shape physically and from the standpoints of training and morale," he said.

"There will be lots of fighting for us before this is over. The right time will come for an expeditionary force to go over to the continent and battle the Germans in their country. But it must be the proper time, and in the meantime we must make certain, as far as we can, that nothing goes wrong with the United Kingdom.

Training in mobile warfare must progress, he said, and there must be higher training in the use of the army as part of a composite force.

Gen. McNaughton said he does not plan particularly to look into Canada's home defences. "The defences here are in good hands," was all he would say on that subject.

He had no comment when asked what he thought of the federal government's proposed plebiscite on conscription for overseas service. He had heard only briefly of the plan, the General said, and knew nothing of the background.

One thing he wanted to do while in Canada, he said, was to see the country's "great industrial achievement."

"The quantity and quality of the materials coming out of Canada are literally amazing," he declared. Rigorous trials given by the army overseas had proved its Canadian equipment invariably to be of the best quality.

Professor Sackville, showed a film entitled, "The Plow That Broke the Plains."

1941 Attendance Alberta Normal Schools Stated

There were 533 students enrolled at the provincial Normal schools in 1941, of whom 189 were at Calgary and 334 at Edmonton, but the department of education has no records of their racial origins, Premier William Aberhart, minister of education, stated in the legislature Tuesday.

Giving this information in reply to a question from E. J. Martin, Ind., Peace River, the premier stated that while there was no record of racial origins of the students, every teacher before being issued a license to teach in Alberta, was required to take an oath of allegiance.

Youth Pleads Guilty Group Theft Charges

Kenneth Binden, 23, formerly of Prince Albert, who was caught "red handed" in the office of the W. W. Sales Co. store at 2:30 a.m. Monday, pleaded guilty to two additional charges of breaking and entering, when he reappeared in city police court Tuesday. He had pleaded guilty to breaking into the Sales Co. store Monday, when he was arraigned before Magistrate A. I. Millar, K.C., a few hours after he was arrested.

The new charges were laid as a result of break-ins at the premises of the Muttart Lumber Company and Johnson's Bakery over the week-end. Accused pleaded not guilty to a fourth charge of breaking into the office of Deliveries Ltd.

The youth, in company with a 16-year-old boy who will appear before juvenile court authorities Friday, was captured when police received a call from E. T. Patrick, caretaker of the W. W. Sales Co., that thieves were working in the building.

Binden was remanded to Feb. 9 on all four counts while police make further investigation.

In all four cases the thieves obtained very little loot for their trouble. Police reported that cash taken amounted to only $3.58, which together with two fountain pens and $5.00 worth of cakes from the bakery was the total haul.

Charge Dismissed In Supreme Court

Conspiracy to defraud and false pretence charges against George S. Day, Edmonton insurance adjuster, were dismissed in supreme court Tuesday by Mr. Justice W. R. Howson.

The charges arose out of an adjustment of damage to an automobile in which it was alleged by the crown that the repair bill had been increased by $33.

Dismissing the charges Mr. Justice Howson said the evidence showed there had been a series of negotiations concerning the repair account, but had a reasonable doubt that these negotiations were in the nature of a conspiracy to defraud the Canadian General Insurance Co.

Late Filing On Farm Bonus Plan Will Be Probed

Complaints that some farmers in southern Alberta have been deprived of their bonus under the Prairie Farm Assistance act because provincial authorities were late in filing necessary returns will be investigated, officials of the department of municipal affairs said Tuesday.

The complaint was brought to the attention of the provincial authorities by J. H. Walker, Ind., Warner, who had correspondence showing that after arrangements to declare certain areas as low production areas were completed, the farmers did not obtain the bonus because provincial authorities had been late in supplying reports.

Investigation into the matter was promised as soon as further information is available.

Dwelling Zone By-Law Case Is Aired In Court

Judgment was reserved by Magistrate A. I. Millar, K.C., in police court Tuesday when the first prosecution for violation of the city's one-family dwelling zone bylaw was concluded. His Worship stated that a decision would be handed down on Tuesday.

Mrs. Mary S. Randlett, 10910 81 street, the defendant, was charged with converting a basement storeroom in her home into living quarters after permission to do so had been denied by the city building department. The house, witnesses testified, was composed of four different suites, each occupied by a separate tenant, and was situated in a one-family dwelling zone.

Ald. A. Bisset, appearing for Mrs. Randlett, submitted that the house was designated as an "apartment" prior to the enactment of the one-family dwelling zone bylaw on Oct. 10, 1933, and that under the provisions of the Town Planning Act, the accused was legally entitled to use her home as such, and if it was so desired, to extend the number of suites on the premises.

DENIED APPLICATION

Principal point of contention, however, was in connection with "structural changes" which according to the evidence, had been put into effect by Mrs. Randlett after permission to do so had been denied by the city.

M. C. Dewar, assistant city building inspector, testified that the accused had first made application for permission to construct a basement suite on Dec. 16, 1937, and that on being denied had made three appeals to the zoning appeal board which were all subsequently denied.

Clifton G. Purvis, K.C., crown prosecutor, contended that under the terms of the bylaw, accused had no legal right to make the structural changes, while Ald. Bisset maintained that by the terms of the Town Planning Act the number of suites could be extended.

Possibility that the bylaw might be ultra vires was hinted at the hearing. While the Town Planning Act provides for the extension of buildings designated as apartments before the bylaw came into effect, structural changes are denied by the bylaw.

In discussing this point Mr. Purvis declared: "The bylaw is either right or wrong. If the city has gone too far in this connection it is not a matter for this court." He inferred that the court should regard the bylaw as being legally constituted.

Danish Spitfire Fund Is Growing

The Danish Spitfire fund has reached $130,000, according to reports received from the Danish Council of London, England, by the chairman of the Canadian Aircraft Fund, H. F. Nielsen of this city.

Subscriptions to this fund in Canada, from people of Danish origin, are being reported daily, and it is hoped that the Canadian objective can be reached by March 30 as it is planned to turn over to the British government on April 9, enough money to buy a squadron of Spitfires for the R.A.F.

Mr. Nielsen stated that Danes in Canada can send their donations to any branch of the Royal Bank in Canada or to the office of the Danish Canadian Aircraft Fund in Vancouver, Calgary, Winnipeg, Toronto, Montreal and Little River Post Office, St. John County, New Brunswick, or to the Canadian head office at 9720 108 Street, Edmonton, Alberta.

Through the Danish Spitfire fund, people of Danish origin living in free countries are trying in an additional way to show their loyalty to the British Empire and their Allies, Mr. Nielsen said, and they are also trying to help a little more for Britain's victory and Denmark's freedom.

THRONE SPEECH DEBATE CONTINUES

Legislator Urges Assistance For Farm Credit Groups

Advocates Settlement Reasonable Portion Of Original Debt

The provincial treasury department was urged to seek a way in which farmers' credit groups in the "special areas" of the province might negotiate a settlement of their debts to the banks on a reasonable percentage of the original amounts, by C. E. Gerhart, S.C., Acadia-Coronation, in the legislature, Tuesday.

Mr. Gerhart, speaking in the debate on the throne speech, said that individual farmers in his constituency had been able to make settlements with the banks for amounts ranging from 30 cents down to 20 cents on the dollar, but that those who borrowed under the group joint-guarantee plan had been able to make no such settlements.

The provincial government, he said, had given a guarantee on these loans, over and above the farmers' joint guarantees, and he urged that steps be taken by the government to bring about an equitable settlement.

Mr. Gerhart stated that, when drought struck the "special areas" of his riding, few farmers could borrow on their own credit, and they formed groups to guarantee each other's loans. Subsequent to this, the government guaranteed loans to farmers in these groups.

"When trouble came to these areas, some of the farmers paid up their indebtedness but most of them couldn't," he said.

He said that those farmers who had individual loans had gone to the banks, and that "the banks made fair settlements for as little as 30 cents on the dollar."

However, he added, when farmers who had borrowed under the group plan asked to be able to make payments in settlement, they were informed by the banks that they could only deal with them through the group.

With the government guarantee behind these group credits, he said, the banks so far were demanding full payments.

SCORES "U" SENATE

Many of these farmers, he said, were willing to liquidate all their assets if it was possible to discharge their debts, but they did not wish to liquidate their holdings and still have a deficiency debt hanging over them.

The Coronation member, in his opening remarks, scored the refusal of the University of Alberta senate for its refusal to grant an honorary degree to Premier Wm. Aberhart. He stated that certain Calgary lawyers on "his senate had worked to prevent the honor to the premier in order "To bid for the favor of the prime minister and the department of justice at Ottawa."

Stating that it was "Becoming difficult to say anything against the Dominion government without being termed disloyal," Mr. Gerhart declared that the maximum war effort could not be reached until the monetary reform policies of the Social Credit party were adopted.

He said that the federal price control was in reality the "just price" advocated in peace time by Social Credit, and that "debt free money would complete the picture."

4,514 Articles Left On Trams By People Here

Forgetful people left 4,514 articles in street cars during 1941, a report filed Tuesday with city commissioners by Charles Wild, street railway operations clerk, disclosed. Last year's total was 4,287.

Approximately 40 per cent of all articles are reclaimed by owners, and the balance is auctioned off once a year, the proceeds of the auction going to street railway maintenance account. All articles, however, are kept for one year before being auctioned.

The most numerous article found on street cars are gloves, and the only one glove is left by the forgetful patron.

Extra Medical Board Needed For Army Here

An extra medical board had to sit late at the Prince of Wales Armory Tuesday afternoon to handle a heavy surge of applicants for active army enlistment.

In all 46 went before the medical boards, with 27 being accepted.

Enlistments under the 24th quota closed on Saturday and all men who have been taken on the strength since the week-end will go to the credit of the 25th quota. Figures for the 25th quota have not yet been received by Lt. Col. Alan Elliott, officer commanding No. 13A district depot.

Civic Departments Are Ordered To Prepare For Daylight Saving Time

Instructions were issued Wednesday to superintendents of all civic departments to arrange for the institution of daylight saving time in the civic departments on Monday next, February 9. The change is being made in compliance with the order-in-council passed recently by the federal government making daylight saving time compulsory throughout the Dominion. The order-in-council was passed to conserve power for the nation's war effort.

Getting Around
with Jack DeLong

A super-brain to boss a scatter-brained world is what this not so human race requires. At least that's the contention of the Bernard Shaw of the scientific world, Mr. H. G. Wells. In a recent article, published in The Sphere of Washington, Mr. Wells speculates on the future in the colorful style of speculation that makes Wells so absorbing.

With his unusual humorous realism H. G. takes on the role of a sort of scientific bootle for this human "race".

He looks over the "charts" and figuratively shakes his head. He says that on the "form" shown by homo sapiens in the last few thousand years the race is a poor bet. On past form we look pretty certain to end up in the not too distant future in the also ran position

The switch-over is being made simultaneously in Canada and United States and it'll probably save, besides, electricity, a lot of confusion about when to listen to your favorite radio program if it emanates from the States and you live in a region that has maintained daylight time.

The traditional enemy of daylight time—the farmer—is taking the order making it compulsory to change without a word of complaint because, as one farmers' organization official put it, "this time it's a war measure." But he estimated 90 per cent. of all farmers are still against it because he has to do more work in the dark and he can't work with his hay or harvest in the summer until the dew is off the ground. And the dew doesn't leave any earlier because it's daylight time.

BOON TO RAILWAYS

The change should be a boon to railway information clerks, who've listened for years to the question "Is that standard?" when they give the time of a train departure or arrival. Now, no matter where you live, the 5 o'clock train is just that, not the 4 o'clock arriving at 5 o'clock daylight.

Air Cadets Of City To Stage Demonstration

To man Canada's aerial armada of tomorrow the Air Cadets League of Canada has been formed. These bright-eyed, alert youngsters who are too young to serve with the warrior squadrons of the skies, are preparing for the day when they may be needed for that purpose by learning the rudiments of aviation and the benefits of clean discipline by membership in the Air Cadets League.

From one end of Canada to the other these junior birdmen are going through their paces and Edmonton is right up in the van with a fine smart unit, No. 12 Squadron.

On Friday night of this week the Edmonton squadron under the direction of Squadron Leader Colin MacKenzie, will stage a snappy demonstration drill for the public in the arena. The show starts at 8 p.m. and will be attended by His Honor Lieut. Gov. J. C. Bowen, who will present certificates to N.C.O.'s.

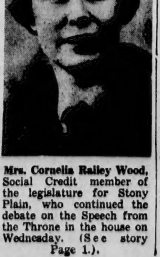

The squadron, which prides itself in its own band, is staging the demonstration to raise funds for uniforms and other equipment.

Tickets may be secured at all Merrick drug stores, at Johnson's Cafe and Mike's News Stand.

Packing Plant Fire Quickly Put Out

Prompt arrival of fire apparatus from halls Nos. 5 and 7 under Deputy Chief Ferguson, quickly extinguished a blaze in the basement of the Canada Packers' plant on the Fort Trail at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday. The fire started in the fertilizer room and was caused by an overheated electric motor. No damage was done to the building but a portion of the fertilizer stock was ruined, principally by water.

Speaks In House

Mrs. Cornelia Railey Wood, Social Credit member of the legislature for Stony Plain, who continued the debate on the Speech from the Throne in the house on Wednesday. (See story Page 1.).

Duck Instinct Goes Haywire: Are Seen Here

The continued mild spell, which is now in its fourth week, has apparently befuddled the migrating instincts of a couple of wild ducks. A. H. Peterson, 9547 103 avenue, recently spied two members of the mallard family swimming about in the open waters of the Saskatchewan. Immediately south of the low level bridge. Mr. Peterson said that the two pre-season arrivals were apparently enjoying the January waters.

The original family of two was supplemented by about 13 others later in the afternoon, according to a report from E. Mead of the Red and White shoe repair shop. They were seen on the river about 300 yards south of the low level bridge.

Expect Budget In Legislature Late Next Week

The Alberta budget will be brought down in the legislature "in the latter part of next week," it was learned Wednesday from Premier William Aberhart.

This is unusually early in an ordinary session, for the budget, as it will be less than two weeks from the opening day of the legislature. In caucus on Tuesday, the premier said, discussion continued on the Dominion-provincial tax transfer agreement and legislation to ratify this agreement will be introduced in the legislature, "almost immediately."

The budget has been reported by Hon. Solon Low, provincial treasurer, as an "economy budget." Before the house opened the treasurer stated that there would be no new taxes and no tax increases.

PENSION INCREASE

However, since the opening, Social Credit members in caucus have called for an increase of $5 a month in old age pensions and also an increase in mothers' allowances.

The throne speech debate has brought forth support for this idea from both sides of the house.

The cost of such an increase has so far not been provided for in the budget, it is learned, and it was stated recently by the premier that an ultimate consumers' sales tax or an increase in liquor prices might be the means of financing the pension boost.

MISSING ITEMS

An item that will be missing from the budget will be income and corporation tax estimates. This will be replaced by a Dominion grant of $4,089,000.

It is not known what account has been taken in the estimates of a possible reduction of revenue from gasoline tax and car licenses as result of gasoline and tire rationing effective this year.

The throne speech debate is continuing this week, with Mrs. Cornelia R. Wood, S.C., Stony Plain, opening the debate Wednesday afternoon.

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

The Inquiring Reporter turned to the participants and spectators on the home front, the housewives and asked their opinions on the advisability of carrying on with organized sport during wartime.

THE ANSWERS

MRS. E. P. LANGFORD: With my husband overseas for over two years, and with the Pacific situation far from favorable, I leave it to the authorities to decide. I am satisfied that they will take the proper action in regard to sport and any other activity if it is found a hindrance to all-out war effort.

* * *

MRS. R. E. HOLMES: Developing physique and morale during the stress of war are two essentials. The participants benefit by developing physique and the spectators benefit by relieving themselves of the daily worries and giving physique brief relaxing spells by attending. Sport is a wonderful morale builder and this is more essential now than during times of peace.

* * *

MRS. D. HERON: If men like Roosevelt encourage the continuation of organized sport it certainly must be well worth the expense and time put into it. In my opinion it is an essential part of the war program.

Essential Improvements To Jasper Now Possible Official Declares Here

Optimism over the possibility of instituting the more essential and less costly improvements in Jasper Park in the near future, was expressed by Maj. J. A. Wood, superintendent of Jasper Park, to members of the Jasper Development committee of Edmonton, at a meeting in the Macdonald hotel Tuesday.

Maj. Wood is en route to Jasper from the east, after interviewing Ottawa officials in connection with more improvements and developments in the park. He met the Edmonton committee with a view of co-ordinating the efforts of this local committee with those of the interested individuals and organizations in Jasper.

Members of the Jasper Development committee of Edmonton present at the conference were: E. T. Love, chairman; Ald. J. H. Ogilvie, Ald. S. Parsons, Ald. A. Blaquet, Charles H. Grant, K.C., E. R. Roper, Dr. R. A. Rooney, G. J. Kellie, R. A. Godson and J. H. Fulton, secretary.

MONEY IS PROBLEM

Discussions centred around the types of improvements required to make Jasper as attractive for tourists as are other western national parks. Principal difficulty in securing the improvements was the necessary funds due to the war, it was stated.

Major Wood expressed the hope, however, that some of the more essential developments that may be done at a reasonable cost, would be carried out within a reasonable length of time.

Maj. Wood informed the committee that a fish hatchery together with rearing ponds would be completed in 1942.

He also announced that considerable work has already been done in preparing the road from the east gate to the town of Jasper. Approximately 10 miles of the Jasper-Banff highway has been prepared for hard surfacing.

HARD-SURFACING

Maj. Wood said he hoped the stretch of road between the east gate and Jasper would be hard-surfaced this year. He added that plans were under way to cover the stretch with calcium chloride, as a temporary dust prevention measure.

The superintendent also informed the local committee that so far as is known labor would be available to continue the construction of the road frm Jasper to the west boundary of the park as a part of the Vancouver connection by way of Yellowhead.

Dorothy Dix Says:

One of the most pathetic things in the world is the way that women gamble with their lives. Not one of them in a thousand has any definite ambition, any goal towards which she is striving, any ideal of what she wants to be, or has mapped out any plan for her future. The majority trust everything to luck. The average woman believes Kismet as implicitly as the most devout Mohammedan.

Dorothy Dix

Probably the thing that girls desire above all other blessings is to be popular with boys. When they sit at home and read an improving book, instead of being out somewhere dancing their feet off, they attribute it to their ill fortune, and they just settle down on the anxious seat without even trying to acquire a line of charm that are far more potent than mere looks.

It is almost an axiom that the homelier a girl is, the worse taste she displays in dressing, the crazier she does her hair, the duller she is to talk to, and the more she treads on her partner's feet when she dances. She doesn't try to offset her lack of pulchritude by being fascinating. She lets Lady Luck knock her out in the first round.

Virtually all women dream of marrying and living happily ever afterwards with fine, noble men who will be good providers and faithful unto death. But they seldom use the slightest modicum of intelligence in trying to make their dream come true.

Every woman wants to hold her husband's affections and keep him thinking she is the only woman in the world, but whether this happens or doesn't happen is almost universally regarded by the sorority of wives as just a matter of pure luck.

Every mother hopes and prays that her child will grow up to be fine men and women who will be an honor to her and a solace to her in her old age, but the great majority of them trust even this to luck. No phrase is oftener on mothers' lips than "you never can tell how children will turn out," yet if there is one thing in the world that you can predict with absolute certainty, it is the way children will turn out

If their mothers have brought them up to be ladies and gentlemen, with good morals and good manners and habits of industry and thrift, they will be crowns of glory to them; but if they have brought them up to be hoodlums, they will be hoodlums to the end and bring their gray hair in sorrow to the grave.

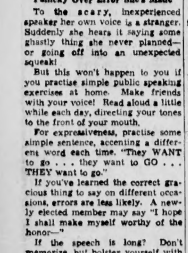

Behind millions of counters are salesgirls who have not been interested enough to find out anything about the goods they are supposed to sell. These girls are failures because they never bothered to learn how to do good work. They trusted to chance that they would catch a husband, or that their bosses would fall in love with them.

What a pity that women cannot realize that our fate is in our own hands and our luck is what we make it.

Aids To Poise In Public Speaking

Panicky Over Error She's Made

To the scary, inexperienced speaker her own voice is a stranger. Suddenly she hears it saying some ghastly thing she never planned—or going off into an unexpected squeak!

But this won't happen to you if you practise simple public speaking exercises at home. Make friends with your voice! Read aloud a little while each day, directing your tones to the front of your mouth.

For expressiveness, practise some simple sentence, accenting a different word each time. "They WANT to go . . . they want to GO . . . THEY want to go."

If you've learned the correct gracious thing to say on different occasions, errors are less likely. A newly elected member may say "I hope I shall make myself worthy of the honor—"

If the speech is long? Don't memorize, but bolster yourself with a few notes. Also, be sure of parliamentary rules!

You can conquer stage fright! Our 32-page booklet tells how. Gives public speaking exercises for pronunciation and expression. Tells how to prepare a speech, deliver it eloquently. Has simple speeches for many occasions, parliamentary rules.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "Public Speaking Self-Taught" to The Edmonton Bulletin, Home Service, 60 Front Street West, Toronto, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Debunker

On the return voyage of Columbus, his ship became separated from the second ship in a great tempest. Fearing complete destruction of the party, Columbus wrote on a piece of parchment the account of his discoveries, wrapped this in oiled paper, sealed it, then buried it in a cake of wax and put it in to the sea in a floating barrel. From time to time there are accounts of the discovery of the barrel and Columbus' message, but all of these have proved to be hoaxes or plain mistakes. Neither the barrel nor the message has ever been found. It might still be afloat, but it probably isn't.

In all the sky there are only four types of cloud, cirrus, cumulus, stratus and nimbus.

Your Baby And Mine

As soon as cold weather comes on and rooms are drafty the mother they begin to worry whether the baby will catch cold if she gives him a daily bath.

There would seem to be some validity to this fear if it were impossible to warm any portion of the house. The tiny baby easily loses heat from its small body surface and being bathed in a chilly room would be an unnecessary risk to take.

But there isn't a home that can't have some warm spot—near the kitchen stove or in a closed bathroom or in front of some small heater—so that failure to bathe the baby regularly must be chalked up to unnecessary fear or to carelessness.

Mrs. A. M. thinks her baby catches cold after every bath. "Is there some way I could give my three-months-old baby a bath without his catching cold? Just now, he has had a bad cold and I have been sponging him off a little as a bath makes him cough more. Please let me know what will help."

A sponge bath would be preferable if the baby were feverish. Otherwise, I think a nice warm bath in a very warm room, with a good rub afterwards and warm clothes, really would make the baby feel better.

The skin is one important organ of elimination and because the baby is so inactive and so swaddled with clothes, it is even more essential that he have a cleansing bath daily and fresh, clean clothes.

Babies, sick or well, do have daily baths unless they are so ill and weak that handling them would be even more weakening to them.

Have the room in which the baby is bathed warmed to at least 73 degrees or more. Heat the bath water so that the temperature by bath thermometer is about 98 to 100 degrees. Keep the baby wrapped in a good-sized Turkish towel or a sheet blanket while the face is washed. So long as the baby has a cold the head washing can be omitted.

Sponge him off rapidly with a soapy wash cloth and dip him in the bath tub. Then rinse him and dry rapidly, finishing off with a gentle massage with warmed oil.

I feel sure that when he is dressed in warm, clean garments he'll feel so much better that he'll fall into a sound sleep and won't cough.

Our leaflet, Bathing the Baby, lists all the necessities for the baby's bath and the detailed ceremony of it. You may have it by sending your request and a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of this newspaper.

McCoy Health Service

The lasting relief of bronchial asthma depends upon:

1—The development of a strong diaphragm which allows the patient to breathe, with perfect freedom of movement.

2—The avoidance of foods especially likely to cause gas, such as onions, garlic, cooked cabbage, dried beans, etc.

3—The avoidance of foods known to produce excessive mucus in patients with an asthmatic tendency. These foods include starches, sugars, and dishes made from the combination of these, whereas the average person in good health who is exercising vigorously may be able to use such foods without an excess of mucus being formed. In those with asthma the use of these foods will almost invariably bring about an increase of mucus secretion.

I have yet to find a method approaching the fasting and dieting treatment in the satisfactory relief of asthma. The fast will usually take away the wheezing within the first 48 hours and in many instances will relieve it within 24 hours.

Patients who have been experiencing attacks for many years seem to recover as rapidly as those in whom the disorder is beginning, and the improvement during the fast is so rapid that even patients who had given up all hope are convinced of the efficiency of the treatment.

The best type of fast to use for the purpose is the straight water fast. In a fast of this kind the patient drinks freely of water for a few days, taking one daily enema, and taking one daily sponge shower bath. The 5 day fast may be undertaken safely at home and even a short fast of this length will often produce remarkable results in stopping the wheezing.

After the fast, the patient must follow a careful diet for some time if he wishes to be relieved permanently of all asthmatic symptoms.

Smoked Pork Part Of Two-Day Meat Plan

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Smoked pork butt can be cooked for two dinners, thereby saving time which can be spent in war work. Many other meals lend themselves to this double duty cooking plan designed to save kitchen hours which most patriotic housewives want to put to our all-out war effort.

Tomorrow's dinner: Grapefruit juice cocktail, smoked pork butt, boiled potatoes, eight-minute cabbage, whole-wheat muffins, butter, cooked fruit, coffee, milk.

Shopping list for family of five for two days (staples not included in listing).

Four pounds smoked pork butt, 1 large head cabbage, 2 pounds tomatoes, 1 stalk celery, 1 No. 2 can fruit or 2 pounds fresh fruit, 6 tart apples, 4 grapefruit or 1 No. 2 can grapefruit juice, 1 loaf whole-wheat bread.

Four pounds smoked pork butt, 6 whole cloves, ½ bay leaf, 1 sliced onion, 1 stick cinnamon, ½ teaspoon celery seed, ½ cup vinegar.

Place smoked pork butt in a deep kettle. Cover with water and add cloves, bay leaf, onion, cinnamon, celery seed and vinegar. Cover tightly and simmer slowly until done. Allow 40 to 45 minutes per pound for cooking

EIGHT-MINUTE CABBAGE

One medium cabbage, salt, pepper, butter, boiling water. Shred cabbage fine. Stand in salted ice water or very cold water for ½ hour before cooking. Drain. Have large kettle full of rapidly boiling salted water. Drop in cabbage a little at a time so as to reduce water below boiling. Boil uncovered for only eight minutes. Drain at once, dot with butter and season. This makes a low cost but tender green vegetable.

Next day's main dinner dish will be hot ham salad made from today's smoked pork butt.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Orange juice, oatmeal, enriched toast, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Scrambled eggs, whole-wheat toast, frosted cup cakes, tea, milk.

DINNER: (See column.)

Mrs. J. Michaels Entertains For Her Daughter

BOUQUETS of fragrant spring flowers were used in profusion throughout the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Michaels Wednesday afternoon and evening, when Mrs Michaels entertained in compliment to her daughter, Audrey, whose marriage to Mr. Dan R. Lovelace, of Bozeman, Montana, will take place in Edmonton on Saturday.

To receive her guests, Mrs. Michaels was gowned in a black crepe Moiyneux model afternoon frock, designed with pointed neckline, long sleeves and softly draped waistline, and marked with antique silver clips. A shoulder corsage of Pelgonian carnations completed her ensemble.

Miss Michaels chose a Chinese tea silk crepe frock, fashioned with pointed neckline, bracelet-length sleeves and draped skirt. A corsage of spring flowers in gold tones complemented the outfit.

The tea table was laid with a white cloth of cut-work linen. Centering the tea table was a cut glass bowl of sweetheart and deeper pink roses. Tall white tapers in cut glass sconces, lighted the table.

In charge of the tea table during the afternoon was Mrs. W. L. Freeman. The trousseau was shown by Mrs. Edwin Roach and Mrs. H. Ivan Hill. Ushering guests into the dining room was Mrs. Archie Muir.

Presiding at the tea urns were Mrs. A. Percy Page, Mrs. R. V. Mellamy, Mrs. O. C. McIntyre, Mrs. Frank J. Wolfe, Mrs. H. P. McGill and Mrs. C. E. Taplin.

Servers during the afternoon included Mrs. Edward Perry, Mrs. Clare Hollingsworth, Mrs W. G. MacKay, Mrs. J. O. Biddle, Mrs. W. J. Broadfoot, Mrs. E. V. Johnson, Mrs. B. Johnston, Mrs. F. T. Cairns, Mrs. R. V. Day and Miss Marion Esch.

Edmonton Women Hear Of Price Control On Wednesday Morning

ADDRESSING a representative group of Edmonton club women at a meeting in the Macdonald hotel on Wednesday morning, Mrs. Frank Ryan, Winnipeg, brought a vital war message to women of the whole district, telling them of the part they will be asked to play in the war effort of Canada.

Mrs. Ryan is in Edmonton as a representative of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Here she has task of conducting the preliminary meeting in Edmonton, to set up working committees of women throughout the district and to anticipate the meeting in late February when Miss Byrne Hope Sanders will address Edmonton women.

A committee was nominated to look after details of the late-February meeting. A further committee will appoint representatives throughout the district to carry on a program of meetings until the women of the whole district are behind the government project of price control.

"After the mass meeting," said Mrs. Ryan in an interview Thursday, "there will be small meetings all over the district, so that in the end, all the women will be co-operating in the gigantic project of government price control."

35 PER CENT PURCHASING

"Canada's women," said Mrs Ryan, "do eighty-five per cent of all the purchasing in the country. They are the largest group of purchasers with the exception of the government.

"It will be their duty and privilege," she continued, "to prevent profiteering in the cost of living, by their own personal and group recording of prices and price change. Through their records, and the action of the price board appointed, it is hoped and expected that a rigid form of price control will be effected.

"There are 1,800,000 articles sold in the 300,000 shops in Canada," she went on. "But there are only 85 per cent of the factories producing civilian goods as previously, the others having been absorbed into actual war production. With the million new purchasers, people who are in industry and the war service today who weren't some months ago, there will be increased demands for articles from these factories.

"In the first Great War," she continued, "80 per cent of the factories were producing civilian goods. Prices rose in an alarming manner. After the war, with the let-down of the purchasing power of soldiers and civilians alike, 21,000 firms went bankrupt.

KEEP PRICES DOWN

"It is the business of women, under the present threat of runaway prices as seen in each union across Canada, to be given information and a record to keep in this project. It will be thus the housekeeper's whole war-time job to maintain security on the home front by rigid guarding of the prices of commodities."

NO "CAREER WOMAN"

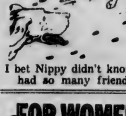

Mrs. Ryan is not a "career woman," although her record of scholastic achievement might make her appear so. Petite and vivacious, with silver hair, a neat, youthful figure and an expressive face, she believes being a housewife is a full-time job.

A graduate of the Queen's university with her degree in economics, Mrs. Ryan was awarded a scholarship for post-graduate work. After her graduation and post-graduate studies, Mrs. Ryan worked for the Toronto Daily Star, and is a newspaper woman at heart. It is this combination of scholastic ability, with housecraft knowledge and interest that fits her so well for her job. She has a little British guest child in her home in Winnipeg.

CEILING MUSTN'T FALL

"I want to leave this little story with you," she said, in conclusion. "It is one I would like all the women to know. The night after Donald Gordon, chairman of the board, gave his Dominion-wide broadcast about the ceiling on the wages board, his little son, Donald, when saying his prayers, said: "Dear God, bless mummy and daddy and Mickey. Make me a good boy and please, don't let Daddy's ceiling fall on him!" I am hoping and trusting that all Canadian women will do their best not to let that ceiling fall, either on Mr. Gordon—or on the whole of Canada."

Flowers mean so much
Only those who have known the sorrow of a death in their immediate family can understand how much it means to have friends send flowers. For Flowers are more than a tribute to the dead. Asks Buyers' List Of Victory Bonds

The legislature on Tuesday, on a motion by E. J. Martin, Ind., Peace River, issued an order for a return showing a list of municipalities that applied for consent of the minister of municipal affairs to buy bonds of the Victory Loan 1941 or war saving certificates.

Consent of the minister was required before purchases of these bonds or certificates could be made, under order-in-council 781-41.

Petty Officer Tells Of Work

Experiences of a sloker on a captured German ship were depicted by Stoker Petty Officer Edward Roberts, to members of the Cosmopolitan Club at their weekly luncheon in the Macdonald hotel, Tuesday.

P.O. Roberts, home on leave, was a member of a relief crew on the captured German ship "Weser" in the west coast, and later was transferred to convoying operations off the coast of England and across the Atlantic.

He was a crew member on one of the first Corvettes built.

He stated that he has seen action against enemy submarines and has experienced bombing raids in Britain. One of the most marvelous features of the war so far is the invincible morale of the British people under continuous pounding, night after night, he said.

W. A. White, president of the club, was chairman.

Seeks Information On Liquor Revenue

Andrew Davison, Ind., Calgary, filed notice of motion in the legislature Tuesday asking that a return be made to show the disposition of money from increases in liquor prices made as assessments for relief purposes.

Mr. Davison wished information on the original date, since January 1, 1936, when liquor prices were instituted by the control board to include the relief assessment, also dates on which any additional increases were made for the same purpose.

He asked for figures on the total additional revenue as result of these increases and whether it was used in paying unemployment relief costs, also, if it was so used, where it was shown in the published public accounts.

If it was not used for unemployment relief, he asked, what disposition was made of this additional revenue.

London Uses Respite From Raids To Clean Up Debris

Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of Britain's prime minister, is shown obviously enjoying a dance with a munitions worker at a recreation centre in the north of England.

With the absence of any heavy raids in recent months, London is getting some work done in the way of clearing up debris resulting from Luftwaffe's earlier "all-out" raids. Here is the view from St. Paul's Cathedral.

Bricks from a bombed building in the City of London are sorted and cleaned so that they may be re-used in eventual reconstruction of areas which fell victim to Luftwaffe assaults.

Tragic days for fallen France—and cold ones. Sign of the times is this one over entrance to a public warming place — the reception room of a local inn at Fontenay - Sous - Bois, France has a coal and clothing shortage.

Experimental Rubber Growing

You never think of finding a new way to hold up your socks until someone steals your garters. And Uncle Sam never gave much thought to sewing up his own rubber supply until the current war in the Far East made him sit up and take notice. Now the old gent is making up for lost time on a little-known 150-acre plant introduction station at Miami, where the government's star agronomists are experimenting with rubber plants to increase the yield. They are doing it by grafting and already have increased single tree yield from three to 21 pounds. Buds from the world's finest rubber trees are grafted on to saplings which are then shipped to Central and South American plantations for maturing. Above you see (below) grafting expert inserting a bud into the incision made in a common sapling. The wound is taped and soon a branch of new rubber tree will spring forth. Top, collecting latex, or rubber sap, from an 11-year-old "guinea pig" tree. This was one of the first of the experimental trees planted.

The BRIDE CAME FORTH

By Louise Holmes

CHAPTER III

VICKY GAYLORD, planning marriage, is shopping for a compact when she is falsely accused of shoplifting. A smartly attired stranger attempts to intercede for her but is snubbed by Vicky. Her father is serving a prison term for embezzlement and she feels the pain of it worse than the loss of her cars, servants and fine clothes. ANN and BILL NORTHWOOD, Vicky's best friends, call to ask her to go home with them after church next day. Meanwhile, their house guest, ERIC LATIMER, tells them of the beautiful shoplifter he saw that day. Vicky, her mind on her meeting with JIM at Windsor when she goes to see her father, prepares for church. The Northwoods, meanwhile, are urging woman-hating Eric to go with them. Seated in the choir, about to sing her solo, Vicky spots the annoying stranger, Eric, with the Northwoods.

CHAPTER IV

VICKY sang her song, a grateful prayer set to music. The pure tones of her voice were low and sweet and haunting. She raised her eyes to avoid those of the stranger who sat with Ann. She rustle. Eric Latimer murmured to his hostess, "Well, I'll be—"

"Sh-h," she warned. "Isn't she lovely? Isn't she exciting?"

ERIC'S SKETCH

Eric produced the inevitable pad and pencil from his pocket and started to sketch with lightning strokes. His intent glance traveled back and forth between Vicky's face and the pad. After several moments he nudged Ann. She gasped softly. Vicky's face, delicately refined features, modest round collar beneath her chin. But the eyes—that expression—demurely audacious—wisely innocent—wistfully daring. Eric had written, "Painted devil," below the sketch.

Slightly horrified, Ann studied the eyes. At last she shook her head, whispering, "No."

"Yes," Eric whispered back.

With the singing of the last "Amen," he touched Ann's arm. "Thanks for a darn good show," he muttered, "I'm walking. See you later." With that he was gone, Eric watched as Vicky descended the stairs. He might be a woman hater but he was an artist. He knew beauty of line and form and color.

thought of Jim and her song was one of mystery and passionate longing. Vicky had an unconscious trick of dipping her words, a low, throbbing note not written in the music. Followed by a swift upbeat, the throbbing low note quickened the heart beat of her listeners.

Bill had once said of Vicky's voice, "You know how your stomach gets all tangled up with your throat when the Empire State elevator drops from floor eighty to ten—well, that's what Vicky's singing does to me." Not a romantic description of a lovely art, but more or less true.

With the end of Vicky's solo there was no sound or movement in the church. Spellbound, the congregation seemed to hold its breath. The minister, stepping to the pulpit, was the sign for a long sighing striding down the aisle as the congregation prepared for a leisurely exit. Vicky, from the loft, noted his going with relief.

He had been but a chance acquaintance after all. She hurried down the steps, hung her gown in the locker, caught up her hat and the cardboard box, and ran to the side door where the Northwood limousine waited.

So many, many Sundays it had waited, its substantiality and the warm friendship of its occupants meaning the difference between desperation and blithe confidence. The chauffeur holding the door, Ann and Bill calling gaily from within—oh, the difference it made. Stepping into the car, she thought Ann looked at her curiously.

"What's wrong?" she asked. "Was I off key or something?"

Pulling her to the seat, Ann kissed her cheek. "You were more stupendous than ever—if that is possible," she said. She had told Bill of the sketch while waiting for Vicky. "I'm afraid I've made a mistake, asking her today," she had said. "If Eric is nasty to her, if he hurts her, I'll shoot him, and I won't wait for sunrise."

DINNER IN AN HOUR

Arriving at the big house in the hills, she said to Vicky, "Dinner won't be served for an hour or more. Let's have the style show now."

Vicky nodded. "You mustn't pull your punches, Ann. If the dress looks, even a little bit, as if loving hands had been at work you've got to tell me."

"I will, don't worry. I'm out to see that you are the loveliest bride that ever took the vows."

Vicky giggled. "That's asking a lot of a $7.85 dress."

"But not a lot of the girl in it."

They climbed the stairs, Vicky carrying the box, and went into Anne's beautifully appointed bedroom. "You put it on," Ann suggested. I'll go down and wait for you. want to get the effect from the hall."

Vicky unripped the flowered chiffon, saying, "Thrilling, isn't it?"

Ann looked back from the door. "More fun," she agreed.

Vicky's gown had been copied from a pictured model shown at a budget style show in New York. It was made of fine white pique, high, round neck, a yoke giving the new close shoulder line, long sleeves, tight bodice, slim skirt. Fullness in the back of the skirt made a short, graceful train.

Gazing into the mirror, half fearfully, Vicky had to admit that she had done a little better than well in the creation of her own wedding gown.

She put on the cap, a quaint little item also designed by the budget stylist. It was a masterpiece of bridal artistry. Made of pique, it fitted the crown of Vicky's shining head, well back from the face. Surrounding the bonnet was a halo-like brim of sheerest organdy. Standing out primly, it formed a misty frame for bright curls, wide blue eyes, peach bloom skin.

Starting for the door, Vicky stopped. Lifting an armload of pink roses from a bowl, she dried their stems and proceeded to the top of the stairs.

I'M COMING

"Ready or not, I'm coming, Ann," she called. She walked slowly, downcast eyes on the roses. Some day soon, in two weeks and just a little more, she would walk down these stairs. There would be music and friendly faces—and Jim. It would mean that she had served her time, that her day of release had come. Thinking so, she came down the stairs slowly, step by step, skirt trailing, little white slipper toes peeping in and out. Roses nodding.

She was so deep in happy dreams that she neither noted Ann's absence nor the presence of Eric Latimer in the lower hall. He had come in from his walk. He stood there, transfixed, hat in hand, while Vicky descended the stairs. Eric Latimer might be a self confessed and boastful woman hater, but he was an artist. He knew beauty of line and form and color. He worshipped at the shrine of beauty in all its manifestations.

Reaching the hall, Vicky raised her blue eyes. Expecting a triumphant shout from Ann, she found herself gazing into the forbidding eyes of a tight-lipped stranger who had irritated her upon two previous occasions. Somehow, his accusing glance held her. They stared into each other's eyes for a wordless moment.

DESECRATION

Then he said, lips scarcely moving, "How can you do it? How can you desecrate everything that is beautiful?" His tone was one of pained incredulity.

Vicky was angry at once, and a little terrified. Was the man mad? "If I wish to desecrate anything, that's my affair," she said airily.

"Who are you?" he asked. "Why are you here?"

"Ann happens to be my best friend. If you will excuse me, I must find her."

"Certainly. Don't let me detain you."

"I won't." As she turned away from him Ann rushed into the hall.

"I'm so sorry, darling," she cried. "I was on the telephone— She stopped to murmur rapturously, "Oh, lovely — simply ravishing, Vicky—dear—I can't find words. Turn around slowly. Would you mind coming down the stairs again? I said that you would be the most beautiful bride—" There were actually tears in Ann's loving eyes.

Then she saw Eric and laughed, exclaiming, "My goodness — I haven't a manner to my name, Vicky, may I present Eric Latimer? This is Vicky Gaylord, Eric."

Vicky nodded coldly. "How do you do." Turning he strode from the hall.

"Well, I never," Ann observed, astonished. "Honestly, that Eric Latimer is the most unpredictable human being."

LOATHSOME

"Loathsome is the descriptive adjective," Vicky ran up the stairs, saying, "I'll come down again. Look for flaws—look carefully."

Eric Latimer, having overheard the conversation, returned to the hall doorway. Hidden behind a portiere, he gazed at the stairway. Grimly he said to himself "Damn little rotter. But I've got to see her come down those stairs again. If I were to be struck dead I'd have to see her come down those stairs again."

M.L.A. Requests Explanation Of S.C. Mechanics

Challenge to Premier William Aberhart to bring his proposed monetary reform plan before the agricultural committee of the legislature and "explain the mechanics of it where we can cross-examine him and find the missing links," was made in the legislature Tuesday by W. J. Martin, ind., Peace River.

The northern member, speaking in the throne speech debate, declared the premier should explain his plan to the members of the legislature, "if there is anything in his system." To his suggestion he added, "I am sure we would find quite a few missing links."

NEAR-VIOLENT STORM

Mr. Martin aroused the first near-violent storm of the present session when he charged that members of the legislature, and particularly of the Social Credit board, had made statements both at meetings and in publications which were prejudicial to recruiting and to the war effort.

Chorused desk-thumping from the government benches rose when he said that pamphlets of the Social Credit board had stated that war debts could never be paid, and several times loud interruptions required the intervention of Mr. Speaker Peter Dawson to restore order.

He stated that people of his constituency had protested against statements made in meetings held at Fairview and other places. "The support for the government is not strong there," he said, "and evidently the Social Credit board members just hold their meetings to create a campaign and to spend the taxpayers' money."

DEMANDS RETRACTION

When he declared, "It won't be an inducement for young men to enlist when these people say this is a bankers' war," a loud comment came from James Hartley, S.C., Macleod. "They'll know it before they're through."

Gordon Taylor, S.C., Drumheller, demanded that the speaker retract an inference that the Social Credit M.L.A.'s were disloyal. He was backed by Hon. Lucien Maynard, minister of municipal affairs.

"I did not make a statement that the members were disloyal, but the members shouted, in effect, that this is a bankers' war," Mr. Martin said.

The Speaker accepted this.

He held up a pamphlet which, he said, showed a picture of a soldier with a ball and chain tied to his foot. "Why should they issue pamphlets cartooning soldiers?" he asked.

"We'll tell you," Mr. Hartley interjected.

"Then the pamphlet says, 'huge war debts are piled up.' We all knew this, but it goes on to say, '. . . and can never be repaid.' What a thing to say while our loyal citizens are seeking to raise money through our war loans!

"I am sorry the premier is not here . . ." he continued. (The premier was absent from the house at the time.)

"He's not missing anything," a voice from the Social Credit benches called.

Mr. Speaker here interrupted the proceedings. "I do not mind a few remarks," he said, "but as speaker it is my duty to uphold the dignity of this house." Nods of approval were given by members of the opposition.

The Peace River member expressed displeasure at the order-in-council which required permission of the minister of municipal affairs before a municipality might buy war bonds.

"Why does the government take that stand when they are behind in everything they owe, their bonds, their grants to municipalities and school districts?" he asked.

FAVORS PENSIONS

He urged increased old age pensions and consideration of new provisions for people between the ages of 65 and 70, many of whom, he said, now are charges on the municipalities on indigent relief.

He felt that the money now spent on the treasury branches and the Social Credit board would pay for the pension increase.

If an ultimate consumers' sales tax were levied, he said, it should be clearly stated, "this tax is to pay for the treasury branches and the Social Credit board."

Getting Around

species. The record of the past is on the whole, against the idea of any survival whatever for the human strain."

* * *

And to give point to this gloomy prediction Wells recalls the fate of the Dinosaurs, which were such hard-shelled conservatives that they literally didn't have enough sense to come in out of the wet.

* * *

But even the gloomy H. G. sees a silver lining in the dark cloud that obscures the horizon of tomorrow at the moment. A new world order is impossible, however, without a "world-mind", declares Mr. Wells. A world language in which words will have a changeless meaning, for a change must come into use so that human beings can exchange knowledge readily. They must also be a world federal conservation of natural resources and something really new, in what he calls a "world-wide memory organization."

He states that microphotography, a method by which a whole library can be condensed into a small box, is now available for this purpose. Wells also sees in the British Association for the Advancement of Science the makings of a great international for "pulling our scatter-brained world together into one sane, effective mentality."

* * *

Of this organization he says: "We are the small beginning that may start a mental avalanche that will clean the world for a new beginning."

To the many who will say these are just "impracticable dreams", Wells has this scathing rebuke and warning:

"Perhaps they are. But I tell you that if you will not share in this dreaming, if you will not, in the dwindling time that remains to us, do your utmost to realize this dreaming, then instead of you going out to make a dream come real, freak nightmares will overtake you and yours, and all you care for."

* * *

One of our troubles at the moment seems to be that a fellow named Adolf Hitler has already caught on to this "world-mind" idea.

Municipal Action Only If Necessary

Asked by D. M. Duggan, Ind., Edmonton, whether it would not be in the public interest to defer dissolution of municipal councils in the newly-organized larger units until after the legislature prorogues, Hon Lucien Maynard, minister of municipal affairs, said Tuesday that such action would be taken if considered necessary.

"I have no information up to now that would lead me to believe it would be in the public interest to do this," Mr. Maynard said, "and, as the dissolutions of councils in the five new units was effective last Friday, it might be difficult to suspend this action now."

He added, however, that consideration would be given to the question if it were shown to be advisable.
